In Our HOUSE

By Arthur Mayse

Overshadowed though they are by the sorry comedy at the Court-house, our legislators are not without innocent little diversions of their own. They indulged in one such on Wednesday—a cross-floor slanging match which as Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston remarked later, loosed a good few kilowatts into the air.

With Mr. Williston's salary vote still hanging fire, Premier Bennett tried to hurry tough NDP Randolph Harding through his say on Peace River versus Columbia power.

At once NDP John Squire of Alberni cracked out a protest, telling the premier he had no right to butt in on a point of order to which he wasn't entitled.

"I'm the House Leader!" Mr. Bennett retorted; and the brawl was under way.

Opposition Leader Strachan (he and Mr. Bennett both on their feet and finger-wagging): "The premier is not raising a point of order. It is he who is out of order. The real reason for these hysterical outbursts of his is the knowledge that the people of this province are against him."

Mr. Bennett: "It is you of the Opposition who are out of order—not only in this House, but in the eyes of the people."

And more of the same, until Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane—who had already hurled a rock or two from the sidelines—ended the fuss with a courtly gesture.

"I note in the gallery," said Mr. Macfarlane, "the presence of a group of delightful young ladies from St. Margaret's School. I am sure we have presented them with an excellent example of parliamentary decorum!"

Gallantly done; but he needn't have worried. The grade 10 girls whose red blazers and berets added color to the ladies' gallery, enjoyed every minute of the crackling exchange.

Logically, this being our first private member's day after eight weeks of debate, we should have followed with a reading of Mrs. Lois Hagen's bill to amend the Firearms Act. Instead, with the late-session air revitalized, the House plowed on to vote Mr. Williston his boosted salary and approve his estimates.

Meanwhile, outside the Legislative Chamber, one of our war veteran attendants was coping with a situation that called for tact and ingenuity.

Up to the public gallery doors stepped—a father of three, his mouse-sized brood tagging after.

"Sorry, sir," the attendant told him. "You can't take the children in."

Then, with grandfatherly kindness, he ranged the youngsters in folding chairs in the corridor, passed dad through, and appointed himself baby-sitter.

Minutes later, the inevitable happened.

"We have to go to the bathroom," the little girls announced in chorus.

"So I instructed the boy to stay in his chair," the attendant recounts, "and took the little girls off to the ladies' one by each hand. They went in, and I waited for them to come out."

"They didn't, and I began to worry a bit, what with being off station and of course unable to go in after them. Finally I went to get help from a government stenographer. In the few seconds I was gone, the girls popped out. I hunted them up and down, in a proper sweat, and found they'd strayed into one of the caucus rooms."

"No harm done... but perhaps you'd remind the public they mustn't bring small children to the galleries."

$3 MILLION PER YEAR

'Town' Proposed To Support UBC

VANCOUVER (CP)—The provincial government is studying a $300,000,000 plan for developing an integrated community of about 40,000 on the University of British Columbia endowment lands.

The proposal, disclosed Wednesday by Webb & Knapp (Canada) Ltd., would provide the university with a projected income of $3,000,000 a year when the community is fully developed in 15 years.

The proposal involves 10 self-contained neighborhoods; an 84-acre office and research estate and town centre complete with civic, cultural and commercial facilities.

The development would not involve land currently in use or projected for development by the university nor would it interfere with those who now lease property on the endowment land.

RETAIN CONTROL

E. R. Loftus, vice-president of Webb & Knapp, said that under the company's proposal the provincial government would maintain control of the land, and all buildings would be used on a lease basis.

The industrial estate planned would give private research facilities a chance to be developed along with research undertaken by UBC, he said. The projected road system would provide rapid access to the university without the necessity of heavy traffic in dwelling areas.

The B.C. government has been studying the proposal for 15 months, Mr. Loftus said.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Eric Martin introduced a law in the legislature Wednesday paving the way for an $18,000,000 health centre at UBC.

Construction is expected to start in about two years, Mr. Martin said.

The centre will include a 410-bed hospital. There will be 60 beds for psychiatric care.

Altogether there will be about 16 various units of the centre, providing all types of care and research, including dentistry.

Mr. Martin said financing will be under the provisions of the Hospital Act. The federal government will provide 15 per cent of construction costs and the provincial government will split the remainder with UBC.

CHARGES LIBERAL PLOT

Caouette to Be Run Over?

DONNAcona, Que. (CP)—Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, said today he believes reports from party sources that Liberal supporters are planning to stage a traffic accident that would put him out of action for the rest of the April 8 federal election campaign.

He first mentioned the reports near the end of a campaign speech Wednesday night in this newspaper—manufacturing town 30 miles southwest of Quebec City.

About 1,600 persons filled a church basement to overflowing for the meeting.

Mr. Caouette told a reporter today he is not making any changes in his travel plans and is not asking for a police escort in the light of the reports.

He said the Liberal party would suffer and his party would benefit if he were injured in a "deliberate accident," but he is convinced the reports were authentic.

The reports were made to Social Credit provincial headquarters in Montreal Wednesday in two telephone calls. One call was from a man who declined to identify himself and the other was from a Social Credit organizer in Montreal who said he had been told of the accident scheme by a Liberal party worker.

In Montreal a spokesman at Liberal party headquarters,

Paul Boudreau, said Mr. Caouette's reported statement is "pure fantasy."

"Who is going to believe such nonsense?" he asked. "We are adults."

By now, even the highways committee must wish the courts had got the job.

Somebody seems to have got the rock pile confused with the boulevard trees—tryin' to make little ones out of big ones.

One good thing about election campaigns—they have a termination date that can't be delayed.

Dief Taunted By Hecklers

EDMONTON—Hecklers gave Prime Minister Diefenbaker his roughest reception of the election campaign here Wednesday night, repeatedly interrupting his speech with cries like "What about Harkness?" and "You're a liar."

Economic Aid Plans Revealed By Pearson

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONCTON, N.B.—A national development corporation will be created by a new Liberal government to provide capital to get new industries started in Canada, Liberal leader L. B. Pearson told an audience of 1,200 here Wednesday night.

He spelled out in detail the Liberal program for industrial expansion in Canada. Industrial growth was needed to restore prosperity and to put an end to unemployment.

He was aware that action was needed to create a quarter of a million new jobs for Canadians in each of the next four years. It meant ending industrial stagnation. It meant seeing that present industries started growing again and that new industries were started to develop Canada's resources.

He said it was now necessary, in light of progress made on trans-Canada highway construction and in the roads to resources program, to have consultations with the provinces on national highway policy.

"The needs will vary between provinces," he said. "Some will require better access to the trans-Canada. Some may want to emphasize roads to resources. Others will want to concentrate on trans-provincial highway systems."

The urban development program, he said, had been made ready by the government but "we were denied the right to bring it in."

His new promise would provide a system of federal loans to municipalities to finance their half of urban renewal schemes shared by the federal government.

Another part of the urban program, he said, would be the provision of low-cost loans to provinces and municipalities up to 90 per cent of the cost of low-cost housing. In addition, loans would be provided to help pay for assembly of land set aside in urban developments for central facilities such as schools and shops.

The Diefenbaker visit to Edmonton, in spite of the heckling, was a far different story than his visit here during the last election campaign. On that visit he drew only 1,700 persons who were unresponsive to his plea for votes. Some observers said that, meeting showed the "Diefenbaker had burst" because it had been in Edmonton in the 1958 campaign that he had been literally mobbed by wild supporters.

On Wednesday night Mr. Diefenbaker had barely started his speech before he recalled that last year he had "far fewer people than here to night."

Every seat in the 2,700-seat auditorium was filled. The aisles were filled with standees, and in the spacious lobby there were at least 2,500 more persons who heard the 70-minute speech over a public address system.

The heckling of Mr. Diefenbaker began when he launched

But while he was being peppered with taunts—someone even threw bits of apple towards the stage but they fell short—the prime minister was not rattled and nearly always "gave as good as he got."

He had reason to: local Conservative workers had organized for him one of the biggest rallies to attend any of his rallies so far in the campaign. Estimates of the overflow crowd at Jubilee Auditorium ranged from a conservative 5,000 to 8,000.

Buoyed by the turnout—and the audience was overwhelmingly for him—Mr. Diefenbaker held his own with the hecklers by firing back, such replies as, "this appears to be the same Liberals I faced in the House of Commons."

Liberalism denied the prime minister the right to speak in the House of Commons—these people belong to that school."

NEW PROMISES

Between the heckling the prime minister unveiled some new promises, measures to assist the provinces in more highway construction and to aid municipalities and provincial governments in urban development.

Perjury Claim Made at Probe

By FRANK RUTTER and AB KENT

A highways department engineer made money on the side by renting equipment to contractors on government jobs, the graft probe was told today.

The employee: Vincent L. Gresty, mechanical superintendent at Kamloops between 1957 and 1960, identified as a friend of Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi.

The evidence came to light today before the legislature's public accounts committee investigating allegations of graft in the highways department.

It was brought out by committee counsel Lloyd G. McKenzie in questioning Harvey A. Campbell of Creston, who said he, too, was a friend of Mr. Gagliardi's.

Mr. McKenzie based his questions upon the secret RCMP report on Project 819, a section of Trans-Canada Highway near Revelstoke, which he started to use Wednesday night.

Witness' Testimony Interrupted

On Wednesday Mr. McKenzie had asked if Mr. Gresty had asked for equipment on Project 819—$1,700 and $1,391.

Mr. Campbell started the day denying any knowledge of Mr. Gresty being paid for renting equipment used on Project 819. He said he rented a grader from Mr. Gresty's brother, James.

Mr. McKenzie then produced the photostat of a letter from Mr. Campbell to Union Contractors, who were in charge of 819.

Dated Aug. 6, 1958, it said: "Refer: our letter July 29 and Le Tourneau scraper, Model K.P."

"Dear sir: Please be advised that these instructions given in error. All rentals on the machine belong to Vince Gresty."

"Please apply the credits for this machine to him."

Mr. Campbell admitted the letter bore his signature, but said he didn't remember writing it.

"I can't recall just what the circumstances were."

Mr. Campbell said he had been under the impression the machine was owned by Mr. Lymburner.

Earlier Mr. Campbell had testified that he bought his equipment firm, Mid-City Construction, from Vincent and James E. Gresty in 1957.

He held all but one share. Mr. McKenzie asked if he paid anything for the shares.

"I don't recall that I paid anything for them."

Mr. McKenzie asked if it was true that Mr. Gresty was the financial backer for Mid-City.

He said that Burton Lymburner was also "very close to me." He is the man that Montana contractor Dick Holzworth earlier testified was a contact man between the contractors and Highways Minister Gagliardi.

Mr. McKenzie said that in the mid-1950s Mr. Gresty and Mr. Lymburner were associates in several companies.

He asked what relationship Mr. Gresty had with the highways minister. They were friends, replied Mr. Campbell.

"With Mr. Gagliardi, too?"

"I imagine so."

"On a social basis?"

"Yes."

Mr. Campbell repeated Wednesday's testimony that the deal was for Mr. Gresty to quit his government job and come into the company once it was doing well. He never

Financial Backing Claimed

Mr. McKenzie then read part of a statement which Mr. Campbell "didn't remember" giving to the RCMP in 1959.

It said flatly that Mr. Gresty was the financial backer of Mid-City.

"Did you have any direct dealings with Mr. Gagliardi?" asked Mr. McKenzie.

"No."

Mr. Campbell did admit, however, he knew Mr. Gagliardi—"I guess you would say I was a friend of his."

Mr. McKenzie then asked if Mr. Campbell knew about Mr. Gresty receiving cheques from Union Contractors. One secretary.

batch was on July 22, 1958, a total of $1,700.

Mr. Campbell said he didn't. There was also an amount of $1,394 paid by Union "on behalf of Mid-City for Vincent L. Gresty."

Mr. Campbell said this figure did "ring a bell."

"It relates to that particular scraper again."

He related a story of some mixup on ownership of the equipment, saying that it actually belonged to Burton Lymburner. He said he was involved in "a terrible struggle" to keep ahead of Mr. Lymburner and Fred S. Bell, his secretary.

Strachan Again Denied RCMP Report

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan Wednesday lost two attempts to get an RCMP report before the highway graft investigation.

He tried to secure permission of the legislature to put the report on a confidential basis to the members of its public accounts committee.

All government members of the committee voted against his bid.

When the committee decided to ask for the report two weeks ago, its chairman Irvine Corbett (SC-Yale) and Co-mox Socred Dan Campbell voted with the opposition members. But not Wednesday.

The vote was a challenge to a ruling by Speaker Hugh Shantz that Mr. Strachan could not present his motion for the report at that time. It is the 28th resolution on the House order paper, and therefore cannot be moved before the others are dealt with without unanimous consent of the MLAs, Mr. Shantz said.

Mr. Strachan's first attempt, at the start of Wednesday's sitting was vetoed by Premier Bennett. The second, resulting in the vote of 25-19, was at 6 p.m.

into an attack on the Liberal party for having "conceived" an article critical of the prime minister published in a U.S. magazine, Newsweek.

"Boo," shouted several hecklers.

"You're a liar," cried a young man who had leaped to his feet in rage.

"Throw him out," screamed a number of Diefenbaker supporters angered by the heckler.

An usher attempted to get the young man to leave but he stood his ground.

Mr. Diefenbaker, after delivering his report about "the same Liberals," continued his attack on the Liberals, claiming they "sacrificed their principles for power at any price."

They decided to strangle parliament.

"Why didn't you bring in a budget?" demanded a heckler.

"I'm glad you asked that," Mr. Diefenbaker said. "Apparently you came here to find the truth. They wouldn't let us. They didn't want it. The crowd roared its approval."

"You had 200 seats before," another heckler shouted. "Why didn't you do something then?" the prime minister didn't answer.

"If parliament is subverted," Mr. Diefenbaker continued, "democracy is destroyed."

"You had 200 seats," the heckler persisted. "You fiddled while Rome burned."

'EARNED YOUR PAY'

Mr. Diefenbaker replied: "You've already earned what you're being paid for, the interruptions."

Again there was a call from Conservative supporters in audience to throw the heckler out. A fellow heckler declared that was "Conservative freedom of speech." No one got thrown out.

In defending his government's nuclear policy, Mr. Diefenbaker said the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile never was intended to defend Canada, but simply to protect the U.S. Strategic Air Command, and its nuclear deterrent.

Canada would assure that its forces serving under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were just as well armed as those of any other NATO nation.

As to forces in Canada, he said proper weapons would be available in event of "danger," and that Canada would make arrangements for this. But any such agreement for the supply of nuclear warheads, he said, would not be entered "unless Canadian sovereignty is fully protected and with Canada able to take her own course."

"What about Harkness? What does Harkness say?" hecklers shouted. Mr. Diefenbaker replied that "sometimes it is difficult for those who will not see the truth or hear it."

EMOTIONAL APPEAL

Mr. Diefenbaker wound up his speech with an emotional appeal for forgiveness for any mistakes he might have made.

"I don't say I haven't made mistakes," he said.

"I think that the Lord judges these mistakes on the basis of what is in the heart of that person who made the mistakes."

be started and existing ones expanded without seeing that there is enough capital available to get them going, said Mr. Pearson.

"Where this money could be provided from private sources, that's where it should come from, of course," he added, but when this proved to be impossible, for one reason or another, then an alternative had to be found.

For this purpose a national development corporation would be of positive assistance, he said. This corporation, working with the existing industrial development bank, which the Liberals also intend to expand, would be able to assist in the expansion of all kinds of productive industry.

The corporation would be able to sponsor and invest in large economic projects beyond the scope of private industry in Canada, he pointed out.

INDIVIDUAL SAVINGS

The national development corporation could be financed in part by the savings of a great many individual Canadians, he said. Indirectly and on their behalf, it should be financed by life insurance companies and pension funds. In part it should be financed by government loans or with bonds and debentures guaranteed by the government.

(4)—Restoring prosperity does not mean only expanding industry. It means expanding municipal investment as well, said Mr. Pearson. It meant more and better roads, schools, sewers and a host of other things.

At the meeting the Liberals came up with a new slogan, it is "Pearson or Paralysis."

Senator John Connolly tossed out the slogan. He said that just as Canadians in a previous election had the choice of "King or Chaos" so today it was "Pearson or Paralysis" because the country was faced with a crisis that could undermine its parliamentary institutions.

With Mr. Pearson and Senator Connolly, Premier Louis J. Robichaud, of New Brunswick, spoke. They all warned that the major issue in the election was to ensure that the Liberal party was able to form a good strong, stable government at Ottawa. If there was another minority situation like in the last Parliament it might see Diefenbaker and Caouette in a coalition which would be a catastrophe for Canada.

Party Splits Enliven Probe

Party ranks split again, charges of whitewash and witch-hunt echoed at the start of Wednesday night's hearing into allegations of graft in the highways department.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan and witness Clyde W. Thornton got into a cross-fire which ended with committee counsel Lloyd G. McKenzie's suggestion that Mr. Thornton had written false statements in the celebrated "Friend Dick" letter.

First clash came when James Rhodes (NDP-Delta) called for introduction of documents concerning Project 1023.

Committee chairman Irvine Corbett ruled against it, saying the committee's terms of reference were only to investigate Project 819.

The committee voted 6 to 5 against Mr. Rhodes' move, with Victoria Socred J. Dorland Smith siding with the opposition members. Liberal leader Ray Perrault, whose vote could have made it a 6-6 tie, was absent.

Mr. Corbett said the documents might be admissible later, but not now.

'WITCH-HUNT'

"Some members of the committee are engaging in a witch-hunt," said Mr. Thornton. Mr. Strachan asked Mr. Thornton if Mr. Gagliardi promised any liberal treatment.

Mr. Thornton said he had not, nor had four other highway officials—the deputy, director of construction, comptroller, or assistant deputy.

"I did not get any guarantee," Mr. Strachan asked if the "Friend Dick" letter was untrue.

"I did not say it was untrue. The way you're putting it and assurance—no."

Mr. McKenzie interrupted: "Isn't it true you were trying to sell an actual proposal?"

tion to Mr. Holzworth and you were pretty careless with the truth."

"It seems so obvious," Mr. Perrault questioned Mr. Thornton directly on allegations contained in the Holzworth affidavit and other charges which have cropped up in testimony.

On the statement that Burton Lynburner paid Mrs. Florence Gresty, her daughter Gloria or anyone else connected with Calvary Temple, the witness said:

"I have no personal knowledge of any kind of payment."

Asked if there had been payment of money to Social Credit party funds or Social Credit education funds, Mr. Thornton replied:

"I have no knowledge."

On the charge that Mr. Gagliardi had phoned, written or in any way suggested paying off a mortgage or any part of a mortgage, he said:

"He did not."

Under questioning by J. Donald Smith, Mr. Thornton denied he was present during a telephone conversation allegedly made from a Seattle hotel room to Mr. Gagliardi.

This was a meeting attended by Mr. Lynburner, Mr. Holzworth, Glen Geery and John Hayden, according to previous evidence. Mr. Thornton said he was told about it by these people later in the hotel lobby, but if there was a phone call, no one mentioned it.

Mr. Smith asked if the witness was aware of a Holzworth statement that there was a conspiracy, a "fixed contract" in connection with Project 1023.

"If there was a fixed contract, a conspiracy, he was in on it. I don't know anything about it," the witness said.

Tom Bate asked him about a mystery telephone call referred to in testimony Tuesday, when it was stated someone in the highways department told Mr. Thornton to pay off the $6,702 mortgage referred to in the affidavit.

"Who made the telephone call from Victoria?" Mr. Bate asked.

"I'm quite certain it was Mr. Rhodes. I'm quite sure," the witness said, referring to departmental comptroller A. E. Rhodes.

"He had called me several times about contracts and one thing and another."

'Edmonton Could Be a Seaport'

EDMONTON (CP) — Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit Party, says that for $3,000,000,000 Canada could have a Prairie seaway from the foothills of the Rockies to Hudson Bay.

The waterway, he said Wednesday night would make Edmonton a "seagoing port" and give the Prairies a low-cost water transport system that would equal the Mississippi in the United States or the Rhine in Europe.

'We Ask Them To Keep Their Own Promises'

REGINA (CP) — The Liberal party's pro-nuclear policy would not itself be a stumbling block to NDP support for a Liberal minority government, federal leader T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party said Wednesday night.

"We don't ask them to keep our promises, but we do ask them to keep their own promises," Mr. Douglas told an overflow crowd of 2,000 in a dance hall.

The NDP opposes nuclear arms for Canada.

Mr. Douglas repeated a statement made earlier at a press conference that his party would be prepared to support a Liberal or Conservative minority government provided it takes early action to get the economy rolling and relieve unemployment.

But he had added at the press conference that the NDP would reserve the right to vote in Parliament against acquisition of nuclear arms.

Mr. Douglas restated his party's three-point program designed to bring new life to the farm economy.

The plan would preserve family farms by providing credit facilities to allow operators to effect needed improvements, recognize the principle of income parity as between farmers and business and labor, and recognize that agricultural abundance is "not a tragedy but a marvelous opportunity to develop the Canadian economy and contribute to improved living conditions in the world generally."

Mr. Douglas flew here from Ontario Wednesday afternoon and planned to continue on to the West Coast today.

He praised the people of Saskatchewan, led by a "gallant" Premier Lloyd and his cabinet, for establishing the first comprehensive medical care insurance plan in North America.

The Saskatchewan act had generated such a demand for medical care insurance that "no government can hope to survive unless it does something about it."

Seaway cost $475,000,000.

Mr. Thompson told a gathering of young Edmonton businessmen that a waterway—apparently linking the Saskatchewan River and the Nelson River to open a new 900-mile transport artery into Hudson Bay—would cut the cost of hauling western grain to its markets and so yield "a higher return to the farmer than ever before."

DEVELOPER of the U.S. Redstone missile, Dr. Werner von Braun, has announced that the fourth giant Saturn I missile will be hurled into space next week at Cape Canaveral. The rocket is an experimental vehicle preliminary to the Saturn C-5 missile which is designed to put two U.S. astronauts on the moon before 1970.

TWO YOUTHS GUNNED DOWN IN 'TEEN FEUD'

SEATTLE (AP) — A longtime feud between five teen-age boys erupted in gunfire on Wednesday evening, leaving two dead, a third wounded and the fourth in custody.

Killed were David Cunningham, 17, a high school track star, and 19-year-old Andrew J. Drain, Jr. Ulysses Heath, 17, suffered a flesh wound in the arm.

Police Lieut. Dean Phillips gave this account of the shooting:

Cunningham, Drain, Heath and Louis Weaver, 18, were riding in Heath's car as it raced another vehicle in the Madrona district. The second car was driven by Dewitt A. Harris, 19, police said.

The cars stopped opposite one another and the youths in Heath's car walked over to Harris. An argument broke out and Phillips said Heath swung on Harris.

Phillips said Harris signed a statement in which he said he pulled out a .38 calibre revolver and started firing.

The Prairie Seaway could also lower the costs of shipping raw materials to Canadian secondary industry.

Mr. Thompson advanced the idea of the western waterway in challenging Canadians to recapture a spirit of pioneering—"to dare the impossible and achieve a few miracles."

"The time has come for a new vision, a new purpose and a new approach," he told 115

Thompson Offers To Lead 'Right'

STONY PLAIN, Alta. (CP) — Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit party, Wednesday expressed a willingness to lead a new private enterprise party to provide stable government—if Social Credit gains the strong position in a new Parliament of minorities.

Mr. Thompson told reporters after a political meeting in this farming community 20 miles west of Edmonton that the new party—if it ever became a reality—would include elements of both old-line parties.

He made the statement after explaining to about 110 persons at the Stony Plain Community Hall that he would not accept a coalition with the Liberal or Progressive parties if either one emerged from the April 8 election as the largest minority party in Parliament.

"I don't want a coalition," he said in answer to a question.

But Social Credit would cooperate with the largest minority party to push through necessary legislation to meet Canada's problems.

If, on the other hand, Social Credit succeeded in winning the most seats, yet not enough to form a majority government, then he said he would offer cabinet posts to

His speech—winding up a day that saw him fly from Toronto to Edmonton and dash by car to nearby Stony Plains for a farm rally—was largely a statement of Social Credit principles for monetary reform.

He fired a blast at Eric Kierans, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges, for his "slandering and misinformed attack" on Social Credit.

Mr. Stevenson has no plans to see President de Gaulle, but he will lunch with Foreign Minister Couve de Murville Saturday and speak at the Anglo-Canadian Press Club luncheon Tuesday.

After the meeting Mr. Thompson told a reporter that his idea for offering cabinet posts to Liberals and Conservatives to form a majority cabinet did not mean a coalition.

But, he added, it could eventually mean a new party, based on private enterprise principles and business-like government.

Non-Nuclear Warhead Out

OTTAWA (CP) — North American Air Defence Command headquarters says in a 350-word statement available here Wednesday that it would take at least three years and more than $30,000,000 to develop a conventional high explosive warhead for Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles in Canada.

The statement issued by NORAD headquarters at Colorado Springs, and distributed to persons who had questioned NORAD on the point, added that even then the conventional warhead would be "vastly inferior" to existing defensive nuclear warheads now available for Bomarc.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker in a campaign speech at Hall

fax Friday, cited a 1961 NORAD press release which said "Bomarc can be equipped with either high explosive or nuclear warheads."

The NORAD statement said some development effort on a conventional warhead for the Bomarc-A was conducted by the U.S. Air Force but that results "were unsatisfactory and the development was stopped before completion."

Conservatives for Pearson

BY TAKING A HARD, REALISTIC line in the present election Mr. Pearson appeals to all Canadians who realize that their country is in deep trouble. It is impossible, of course, to calculate the results of this appeal in advance of polling day but evidently Mr. Pearson has impressed some of Victoria's leading Conservatives.

Among them Dr. Gordon Grant is not only a medical specialist of international reputation but a Conservative of long standing who loyally supported his party throughout its days of opposition and was president of the Progressive Conservative Association in this area. He had cared to run for public office no doubt he would have been in the Diefenbaker government long ago. But now Dr. Grant (and probably many other professional men of his stature) have decided that the nation needs a new government to end the chaos of our politics. Mr. Pearson, says Dr. Grant in a letter to The Times, is the only leader who can possibly form a government able to govern. Without changing his principles, Dr. Grant proposes to support the Liberal Party and its candidate, Mr. Groos.

Dr. Grant's letter provides a thoughtful, non-partisan examination of Canada's current dilemma. The writer does not agree with Pearson on everything (who does?) but he sees in the Liberal leader the only statesman who is prepared to face the facts of our situation and depend on the intelligence rather than the prejudices of the electorate.

With Political Overtones

IN WHAT THE LONDON ECONOMIST calls President de Gaulle's "first trial of strength, not with the debris of the Fourth Republic, but with the stirrings of the Sixth," nearly 2,000,000 French workers are striking or threatening to down tools.

Some 20,000 iron miners returned to work Tuesday—the first break in a mass stoppage that began March 1. But the 240,000 strikers in the nationalized coal fields may be joined by civil servants and gas and transportation workers. So far the workers have rejected government overtures; they have, indeed, raised their demands for improvement of wages, hours and working conditions.

Observers see the development as more than merely an economic phenomenon. It carries immense political overtones as well. For while General de Gaulle has been accepted as the undisputed political leader of the country, the present widespread upsets indicate that he is by no means beyond criticism. This presents him with a dilemma.

While he is authoritarian in temperament and demeanor, he is

As Dr. Grant puts it, Mr. Diefenbaker sought to gain a breathing spell through the use of "explosively dangerous devices." His surtaxes and other barricades "invited certain retaliation and eventual isolation."

But Mr. Pearson, Dr. Grant says, "has warned that no panaceas are to be had, that the Canadian nation must seek its own salvation by the exercise of certain almost forgotten virtues. It has been a long time since a Canadian political leader found the personal and political courage to deliver this message to his country. If the nation can accept this counsel and will support the man who has offered it, Canada may yet rise to the stature that was prophesied for her in the twentieth century."

"If Mr. Pearson's views, though, are to prevail; if he is to lead the nation effectively, he needs the freedom of action that only an outright majority in the Commons can give. Mr. Diefenbaker was given five years in office; for three of those years he commanded a huge majority. In the views of this Conservative he failed to manage the nation's affairs effectively."

"For its own good, for its very salvation, the nation needs to provide Mr. Pearson with a working majority in the Commons."

This is the considered view of a man with many years of service to the Conservative Party. He undoubtedly voices the sentiments of a vast number of thoughtful Canadians today.

neither by nature nor policy the man to use force to master a civilian protest. To use the heavy hand to end the strike would be, for de Gaulle, a defeat. It would also be so interpreted by the public. For the authority of the President is based on the will of the people; he will be a dictator, but a dictator by consent.

On the other hand, if de Gaulle gives way and grants more of the demands of the strikers than so far he has been willing to give, then other French workers will read the lesson and be inclined to follow the lead of workers in the nationalized industries. This, of course, could lead to severe strains on the French economy and a depreciation of the franc. But continued lack of agreement could bring a still further spread of the strike.

That is why observers see vast political implications in the situation. President de Gaulle, they say, has for the first time come up against domestic realities rather than against flabby politicians. A trial of strength, which could be equally as significant as last year's definitive general election, is on.

Vision and Enterprise

PLANS TO CREATE A MALL IN the centre of the 700-block between Yates and View Streets show admirable initiative and foresight and it is to be hoped that they can be carried through to successful completion.

The project will make a pleasant little court for shoppers, add some small specialty shops, and provide access from Yates Street through the stores to the View Street parking building.

This is a sample of the enterprise which must be exerted if the downtown district is to hold its own against the rise of the peripheral shopping centres. It is a privately originated counterpart of the civic improvements which are to take shape in the Centennial Square, Bastion Square, and other rehabilitation projects.

If some mode of access to Fort Street can be found for the parking building the latter's convenience will be greatly enhanced. Meanwhile, a bow to merchants of the 700-Block Yates Street Association for their constructive thinking.

Mr. Ribicoff Speaks for Us

SENATOR ABRAHAM A. RIBICOFF of Connecticut, speaks not only to listeners in the United States but also to Canadians when he points to the need for preserving our wild spaces.

In the whole of New England, he says, there are only 70,000 acres of wilderness reserves—64,199 in Maine and 5,400 in New Hampshire.

The small remnants, he told the United States Senate Interior Committee now considering his bill to establish a national wilderness preservation system, "speak louder than words in emphasizing what can also, quickly happen to the remaining available wilderness areas located on our public lands in the West...

"This is not a partisan, not a geographic or sectional proposal, but one with dominant concern for the national interest. The lands to be protected belong to all the people."

At this stage of British Columbia's development we have an abundance of wilderness areas, some of them dedicated as parks. But even the parks are subject to intrusion if strong and skillful enough interests exert the right amount of pressure in the right places.

The recent "softening up" campaign to permit logging in Strathcona Park is a case in point. But in British Columbia we seem to lack a Ribicoff to lead the defenders of our wilderness heritage.

Each to His Taste

THE TRISTANESE ARE ON their way home—home to Tristan da Cunha and the eighteenth century.

The islanders were taken to England a year and a half ago when a volcano made their little homeland uninhabitable. But now the island has been declared safe and the former inhabitants have lost no time in starting their return journey.

Money, noise and worry were their chief complaints while in the twentieth century world. Evicted from a quiet life of gardening, tending their few animals, fishing and watching the seasons come and go, they could not adjust to the hectic existence of England—even rural England.

There is much to be said for their attitude. Almost anyone in our world will agree with them, laud their good sense, sympathize with their ideals, admire the good life they represent. And almost no one would dream of giving up our money-mad, noisy, worrisome environment to go with them.

"... Be sad ... play lonesome ... give 'em the 'nobody loves me' bit ... get 'em in tears ... remember every woman is a mother at heart ... break out a sob now and then ... they'll love you for it ..."

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The Prosaic Plodders Will Keep the Peace

MR. KENNEDY was in Costa Rica to confer with the leaders of the five Central American republics, which lie, we must note, not only across the Caribbean from Cuba, but between Panama and Mexico on the mainland. For some time, trouble has been brewing in Panama over the canal. In the future, it could become quite serious.

Lippmann

Without the co-operation of Mexico, a tight containment of Castro's agents is virtually impossible. For once the agents are out of Cuba and on the mainland, the administrative task of checking them in 20 different countries is gigantic.

One of the undiscussed problems of diplomacy is how to persuade Mexico to co-operate in the containment of Castro. For Mexico maintains diplomatic relations with Cuba and is unimpressed by our anxiety about Castro.

Since the October crisis about the Soviet missiles, American anxiety about Cuba has shifted. In October, the anxiety was about a military threat against the United States. Since then, the anxiety has turned to Cuba as a staging area for revolutionary movements in Latin America.

It is fair to say that there is no clear and certain solution in the present phase of the Cuban problem. That is because there is only one way to get rid of Castro quickly, and no responsible person, not Senator Goldwater and much less Senator Keating, wants to take that way. It is to invade Cuba, occupy it and govern it.

The trouble with invasion is that it would be illegal; it would be very costly, not only in men and money, but in influence all over the world. Above all, invasion would be inconclusive. For Castro's men are good guerrilla fighters, and they would be given help from many American countries and of course from the Soviet Union.

We should have on our hands the kind of nasty war which the French had in Algeria, and the great majority of our people, though they are much disturbed about Cuba, know that unless Castro commits overt aggression against some other American state, the remedy of invading Cuba would be worse than putting up with the existence of Castro.

There are many who think that a substitute for invasion would be a blockade of goods, and especially oil. The blockade would be designed to bring about the collapse of the Cuban economy. The President has called this an act of war, and the advocates of a blockade reply that the October quarantine of offensive missiles was also an act of war, which fortunately the Soviet Union did not choose to fight.

It is not clear whether the Russians would choose not to fight and that they would accept a blockade designed to destroy the Cuban economy. But those who are sure that they wouldn't fight can't possibly know that.

What we do know is that it would be much harder for the Soviet Union to accept a blockade to destroy the Cuban economy than it was to accept the very specific quarantine of offensive missiles last October.

Moreover, a blockade would bring us into direct conflict with Soviet ships, and therefore to the verge of a great war. Yet it would not necessarily eliminate Castro. It can be argued, in fact, that as between invasion and blockade, invasion would be the lesser risk.

Either way, however, the risk would be incalculable. That is to say, while it would be easy enough to launch an invasion or to institute a blockade, nobody would be able to calculate the consequences, to foresee the course of events and to define the conclusion.

So we are left with surveillance, containment and the effort to immunize the hemisphere against communism by promoting the Alliance for Progress. This is a long, frustrating course to take.

Again and again we shall be looking around for some sharp, decisive, surgical solution. Those who think they have such a solution will sound like a brass band with all the flags flying as compared with an organ grinder and his monkey. They will have all the good tunes, and the prosaic plodders will do the dirty work of keeping the peace.

In the Opinion of Our Correspondents

Choice of Accommodation

Mrs. P. Giacomini has written to complain of the charges made by the Royal Jubilee Hospital for four admissions to the hospital for herself and a member of her family.

These admissions were not of an emergent nature and it was her choice as to whether or not she would accept the only available accommodation.

The management of the hospital deeply regrets the inconvenience caused Mrs. Giacomini but hundreds of other persons have had reservations cancelled and postponed due to the acute shortage of beds. Over 50 per cent of admissions to the Royal Jubilee are on an emergent basis and these cases must, of necessity, take precedence.

Mrs. Giacomini's records will be turned over to the officers of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service who are presently investigating this matter. It is difficult to understand why Mrs. Giacomini did not seek advice from the management of the hospital regarding her problem. The hospital is not aware of any irregularities which may have occurred in regard to emergent admissions.

The board of directors and the medical staff of the hospital are most anxious to open the additional beds in the new wing at the earliest possible date.

GEORGE MASTERS,
Administrator,
Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Appreciation

I wish to thank the Royal Jubilee Hospital for the kind consideration of management and staff during the 22 days my son was in hospital in connection with a very serious eye accident.

The hospital provided most excellent care, the nursing staff went out of its way to look after my son, and did so with a cheerfulness that was an inspiration to observe.

Because of the Government Hospital Scheme, I only paid $22 (a dollar a day) for hospitalization which cost $546.

In the eye ward there are either two or three beds in a room which is equivalent to semi-private accommodation, yet the hospital, because of the seriousness of eye operations, treats this as public ward accommodation and only charges $1 a day to the patient.

Had the hospital charged me an additional $2 or $3 per day for semi-private accommodation, either because it was needed or because no public ward accommodation was available, I would have gladly paid it. My total bill would then have been not more than $88 (two to a room) or $66 (three to a room). This is indeed a small price to pay when you are talking about hospital bills which total over $500.

In conjunction with the eye specialists of Victoria, the Royal Jubilee Hospital has made it possible for my son to be able to see again out of his damaged eye. My wife and I will always be thankful and most favorably disposed to the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

the Worse it Looks

The more one thinks about the Portage Inlet sewage effluent the worse it appears.

How a municipal council and its officials could entertain such an idea is beyond comprehension. Evidently, they have not studied the situation and have not the faintest idea of the results.

They talk about inland towns that employ the system, but there cannot be any comparison as the situation and conditions at Portage Inlet are entirely different. The inland towns have a river system, supplying a continual flushing of fresh water and a continual, one-way flow. At Portage Inlet, two small creeks run in, but during the months of July, August, September and October there is very little or no water at all.

With an effluent of millions of gallons every day, and two incoming tides every 24 hours to back it up, Portage Inlet would become just one big pond of concentrated sewage effluent.

Who would swim in such a place and who would wish to live along the shores of a sewage effluent?

The muddy shores would become impregnated with the effluent and under a hot sun anything could happen.

Stadium at Gordon Head

With great interest I read in a recent issue of your paper that the city parks committee, with the help of monies from the federal and provincial funds for the 1967 national centenary would like to re-orient the Royal Athletic. I do not see any particular mention of a "cinder track" which is a must if we are to keep pace in the sports world of today.

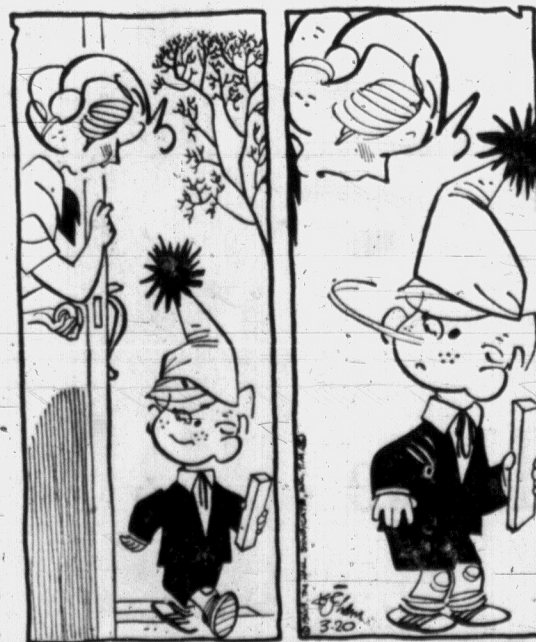

No matter what changes are made the area will still be congested. It is going to cost $75,000 for ground, and $25,000 just to park 140 cars I would suggest this alternative: in the university plans there is provision for a sports stadium at a future date. This plan is working out well in other cities, why not Victoria?

Land is available, but would not cost $100,000. No parking troubles, as well as the fact that something is being done that all municipalities, I feel sure, would approve.

We should not plan for 10 years ahead, but for 50 years. There could be no finer project for our national centenary than this.

OTTAWA:

Deliberate Deception

By MAURICE WESTERN

WHEN Mr. George Nowlan became minister of finance last August, he found himself presiding over a salvage job of formidable proportions. The financial record of his predecessor, Mr. Fleming, was reviewed in a series of articles on this page some weeks before the election of June 18, 1962. Unfortunately for Mr. Fleming and Mr. Nowlan, the record was not then complete. It was a time of great uneasiness in financial circles, reflected in the opposition charges that a dollar crisis was in the making. But these were dismissed as mischievous by the government and it was not until after the election that the dimensions of the crisis became public knowledge.

Western

There was a tragic consistency about Mr. Fleming which persisted to the very end. After the quarrel with Mr. Coyne, he offered himself as the champion of expansion but he made his last bow as a restrictionist finance minister.

Always Deficits

So it had always been. From his speeches in opposition, it is clear that he wished to be an orthodox minister, the author of balanced, tidy (and finely calculated) budgets distinguished by reductions in government expenditure, taxation and the national debt. But it was only when he abandoned the fine calculations that he appeared to be coming close to the mark. He never knew a surplus and the total of his deficits, recorded or forecast—including the depletion of the Unemployment Insurance Fund—approached $4 billion.

All this happened despite the fact that Mr. Fleming was an extremely conscientious and hard-working minister. His ordeal was not over when he moved to the department of justice. Indeed for much of the last Parliament Mr. Nowlan appeared curiously like an interested bystander. The principal targets of the opposition were the prime minister and Mr. Fleming, and it was they, rather than Mr. Nowlan, who had to answer the Liberal charge that the government had been guilty of deliberate deception in its appeal to the electors.

Up to the last days of the 1962 campaign ministers had insisted that all was well. Yet within a week of the polling, Mr. Diefenbaker announced emergency measures, including huge borrowings and trade restrictions by order-in-council, to stop the run on the dollar. It is true, as Mr. Fleming afterwards argued, that a minister of finance must be very careful in what he says. Revelation of the full facts might conceivably have made a bad situation worse. But this is irrelevant to the main charge because the government claimed in fact that it had made full disclosure.

'Concealed Nothing'

"We have given you the facts," said the prime minister on June 14. "We have bared the record. We have concealed nothing and shaded nothing."

Various defences were offered by the government. One was a tu quoque argument; the Liberals in 1947 had also been forced to meet a dollar crisis with restrictionist measures. But there was no election in 1947 and the charge of deception did not arise.

Similarly, it was argued—again by reference to 1947—that well-being and exchange difficulties are by no means incompatible. Apart from the obvious dissimilarity in the two situations (Canada was over-extended in 1947 largely because of the huge credits extended to Britain and Europe), this is rather like suggesting that a man should not worry about meeting his bills so long as he is living well. How in any case is this belated defence to be squared with the claim that nothing was concealed?

The government's main defence, however, was that the storm had blown up suddenly, largely because the voters on June 18 had returned an indecisive verdict.

On the face of matters, the government's argument was contradictory. Mr. Fleming, blaming Liberal speeches for the trouble, maintained that there had been no pressure on the dollar before dissolution on April 18. According to a return afterwards brought down, losses to the fund from April 9 through April 18 were $59.5 millions as compared with losses of $56.5 millions from April 18 to the end of the month. At this point heavy sales were necessary and Mr. Fleming has himself referred to the market uncertainty and speculation of that time as a reason for pegging the dollar at 92.5 cents.

Substantial Loss

This, he claims, did stop the run; "stopped it cold." But not for long. According to Mr. Diefenbaker, the situation on June 14 when the fund had lost $128 millions in two weeks was "not serious." Mr. Nowlan called the loss "substantial... no question about that" and it certainly compares unfavorably with $75.5 millions hemorrhage at the end of April and beginning of May which forced the second round of devaluation.

Moreover, to complete the picture one must take account of the net forward sales to which the bank was committed. These more than tripled in the supposedly quiet month of May. Between May 28 and June 14 they shot up from $48.8 millions to $110.1 millions. So that the situation was nearly twice as bad as it looked. Mr. Fleming and Mr. Diefenbaker consulted and the minister of finance issued a statement on June 10 promising that the government would defend the 92½ cent rate. Despite this assurance the fund lost $74 millions (nearly $100 millions counting forward commitments) in the four succeeding days before the prime minister's all-is-well broadcast.

No one denies that the situation became much worse after the election. According to the Conservatives, the financial community was shaken by the indecisive returns and spectre of minority government. According to the Liberals, it was frightened by the return of a government in which it had long since lost confidence. Whatever aggravated the crisis, the figures suggest that the market was already panicky by June 14.

Gerald Waring

...REPORTING

MONTREAL — While federal Liberals beat the hustings in Quebec to flush out votes for delivery April 8, Premier Jean Lesage and his Liberal ministers present a pretty convincing picture of a government engrossed with its own affairs.

The legislature is in session in Quebec City, the government is preoccupied with its legislative program and the nationalization of privately-owned power companies, and the Union-Nationale opposition is ready to pounce on evidence (a) that ministers are neglecting their duties to electioneer for their Ottawa friends, and (b) that Lesage is subservient to Lester Pearson.

On Sunday the premier underlined his official non-involvement in the campaign by declining to attend the Pearson meeting in Quebec City, where his presence on the platform would have lent the Liberal leader important moral support.

In the other provinces the premiers usually rally strongly to the support of their party's federal leader. Premier Duff Roblin went all out to help Prime Minister Diefenbaker launch his campaign in Winnipeg early this month. In Toronto Premier John Roberts endorsement of Diefenbaker was unequivocal.

The federal Liberals' main challenge in Quebec is Social Credit, and it would appear to be to Lesage's advantage to try to destroy the new ideology lest in time it destroy him. Indeed, Real Caouette has publicly threatened to do just that if Lesage participates in the federal campaign.

But it is probably not true that Caouette's threat had much effect on Lesage's decision. What has given the premier pause are the political realities in this province: the strength of the forces of Quebec nationalism and Quebec separatism, the unpopularity of Pearson's nuclear arms position, a split in the cabinet on the nuclear arms issue with the influential resources minister, Rene Levesque, strongly anti-nuclear, and the need for any Quebec premier to be free to criticize, blame, and even squabble with the government in power at Ottawa.

Despite all this, a Liberal front bench in the last House, seeking re-election here in Montreal, told me that the premier is doing as much as he can while avoiding the practical political dangers to his administration that active involvement would entail.

In the legislature a fortnight ago Lesage showed where he stands by stating that "Mr. Diefenbaker is among those who have rendered the worst possible service to this country that it is possible to imagine."

More than most places, in Quebec politics is a machine-controlled activity. The provincial machine is in good order—and federal Liberals express satisfaction with the practical support they are getting from it. And it will do more, they say, in the crucial last fortnight of the campaign.

The federal Liberals contend, on the basis of their private polls, that they have stopped Social Credit cold: that the Quebec tide is now running out for Caouette and in for Pearson. They now see the Socreds' taking not more than 30 Quebec seats, while the Liberals snap up 40 or more.

These results may be party propaganda. But it's significant, I think, that the federal Grits here aren't critical of Lesage's attitude. Last June they were.

INCOME TAX TIPS

Here is another article in a series on how to make out your income tax return and obtain maximum concessions. It is prepared by Gordon Holmes, C.A., a partner in the firm of Bailey, Monteith, Holmes Co. It will continue daily.

By GORDON HOLMES, C.A.
Today and Friday will be the last of the 1962 Income Tax Tips columns, so don't forget to get those questions into the Victoria Daily Times, P.O. Box 300, Victoria.

Ottawa makes special provision whereby members of the navy, army and air force who do not receive income from other sources beyond their regular pay in excess of $50, are not required to file the annual income tax return. Instead a tax is deducted at source each month from the military, naval or air force pay and this tax is considered to settle in full all taxes owing by them in the year.

In Victoria many people receive annuities and annuity payments received constitute income for purposes of the Income Tax Act. There may be deducted from these payments the amount representing the repayment of capital in each installment. Similarly where interest is received under the provisions of will or trust the portion paid out of capital of the estate or trust is exempt from tax. It is worthwhile to look at your interest payments to make sure that you are only reporting the taxable portion.

Capital cost allowance rates are of interest to many Victorians who receive commission and rental income. Buildings and structures, including component parts, made out of corrugated iron, wood frame, galvanized sheet metal, have a maximum 10 per cent capital cost allowance rate, whereas buildings other than frame carry a 5 per cent capital cost allowance rate. The capital cost allowance on automobiles is 30 per cent. Salesmen have offices and quite often put in leasehold improvements.

These improvements can be written off against income over a five-year period or over the life of the lease plus one period of extension of the lease whichever is the longer.

We're really jumping around today.

If you do not retain a professional accountant and have had business losses, make sure that the business losses incurred in the five previous years and the immediately following year (1963) have been deducted from your 1962 income. In other words, you can carry losses forward for five years and back one year.

Don't forget, Friday is the last day for your questions. (Continued)

THE LIGHTER SIDE

By DICK WEST

Around Africa With Allen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Allen J. Ellender is much too modest. That may be a strange thing to say about a senator, but it is true.

When the latest report on his world travels was published by the Senate appropriations committee, Ellender diffidently commented that "I make no claims to being an accomplished writer."

I feel certain that he wasn't fishing for compliments, but I am moved to disagree with his unassuming self-appraisal.

Man and boy, I have been reading Ellender's travel reports for years, and I have invariably been impressed by the scope of his observations, and by his ability to commit them to print.

This holds true of his newest work, which covers 803 pages and deals with his recent trip to Africa. If asked to assay his literary style, I would say it renders out as one part Herodotus and two parts John Gunther.

Ellender, a Louisiana Democrat, always has had a sharp eye for detail, although he occasionally will omit a pertinent fact.

For instance, when he tells us that while flying from Boston to Madrid he slept through most of the movie that was shown on board the plane, he neglects to mention the name of the film that he slept through.

Again, in describing a lunch he had in Morocco with U.S. vice-consul Minot B. Nettleton, he provides the information that Nettleton's wife "hails from Shreveport, La." But he does not say from what neighborhood.

These, however, are minor shortcomings and in no way diminish the overall sweep and grandeur of his narrative.

Although the report repeats some of the controversial political conclusions that caused Ellender to be barred from parts of Africa, to me he is at his best as a geographer.

I was captivated by his observations that wild animals inhabit some areas of the Dark Continent and that certain native tribes have "little desire for the making of money."

As chairman of the Senate agriculture committee, Ellender also took an interest in agrarian matters. In Egypt, for example, he encountered a "mysterious" method of cattle breeding.

Sacred bulls worshipped by the ancient Egyptians "were supposedly conceived by a streak of lightning," he writes. But, he adds, "I could not get too much information as to how a virgin cow could be made pregnant by a stroke of lightning."

In Dahomey, the hair styles of a group of dancers captured Ellender's attention. Their coiffures, he says, were "typical of the area, and some of them were truly unique."

How a hairdo could be both typical and unique is to me even more mystifying than fertile thunderbolts. But, as we all know, strange things can happen in Africa.

HOME GARDEN

By HILDA BEASTALL

Indoor Start Needed Right Now

The home gardener who wishes to raise his own vegetable plants will be busy this weekend sowing seed indoors.

Tomatoes, sweet peppers, eggplants and okra can be sown now. For a dozen or so plants of each, 20 seed will be sufficient and the strongest dozen seedlings selected.

The whole secret of raising these plants either indoors or in a greenhouse or porch is to have enough daylight and a cool temperature.

Most beginners feel that "hot-house" temperatures are required for raising these plants but in fact, they thrive when kept at around 55 degrees (nights) and 65 degrees Fahrenheit (days).

Sturdy growth and ample root systems are produced with these conditions, and the plants will then be well equipped to go ahead when put out into the garden towards the end of May.

Hot weather during the summer undoubtedly contributes to the success of these particular crops, though many gardeners provide a portable coldframe shelter for peppers, eggplant and okra so that glass covers can be put on should there be a succession of cool nights.

The delicate flavor of freshly picked eggplant is well worth the trouble of growing. It is delicious cooked as a casserole dish with young squash, a few pieces of sweet green pepper, tiny cucumbers with the skin on, a leaf or two of sweet basil, and a wiping of freshly cut clove of garlic.

By the way, if you haven't planted garlic yet, get it in. Separate the cloves, and plant them singly. Each clove will grow into a "bulb" comprised of many cloves.

Okra is a semi-tropical fruit-vegetable of considerable interest, for its beauty appeals to the eye and its fine flavor appeals to the palate. Like the eggplant, it needs coldframe, or cloche, accommodation in cool summers, but we have produced the fruits in the open garden.

Okra is called gumbo in the south-eastern United States, and is used as a thickener for vegetable soups or in mixed casseroles.

This disturbance will shift eastward in the next day or so but progress is expected to be slow. Hence rather little change in the weather pattern is forecast. Mildest temperatures will persist in the southern interior though even here a trend toward somewhat colder values is expected as the weather system drifts eastward.

Leaders Source of Worry

This is one of a series of the Canadian general election. It is compiled by a Montreal-born social scientist and is sponsored jointly by The Montreal Star and the University of Rochester.

By S. PETER REGENSTREIF
(Copyright, 1963)

EDMONTON—The crisis over leadership, so evident everywhere in Canada, is apparent in Alberta as well.

There is pronounced public unhappiness, particularly in the urban areas, over the choice of leaders offered by the parties. It is this factor which basically underlies whatever shifting will take place on election day.

Right at the outset, it must be emphasized that John Diefenbaker remains well in the lead as the preferred man. However, his inability to maintain a government in office has shaken some segments of the Alberta electorate loose from their 1962 support of his party.

A traditional Conservative, a Calgary North caretaker, put the case this way: "I can't see a good man in Canada right now unless there's some young fella in the parties we don't know about. We need some new blood."

Appeal Negative

In contrast with the situation in 1958 and in many ways last June, Diefenbaker's appeal, while substantial, is now, a somewhat negative one. As the wife of a Calgary South corporation executive explained: "I like the way he's hung on after the buffeting he's taken. He's still in there pitching."

"This question of leadership has implications which go beyond the borders of this province. Aside from upper-middle and upper income segments of the population in the major cities and medium-sized towns, Pearson is taking it on the chin.

And in the absence of an alternative to Diefenbaker as an incentive to vote for majority government, some are looking to Social Credit leader Thompson as a prime ministerial possibility. This is noticeable among women under 45 and among small businessmen of the Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club, Elks and Moose etc.

Previous Evidence

There was some evidence of Thompson's attractiveness among similar groups in other areas of the country already covered. It was not mentioned before because it was not clear until now if this pattern was widespread.

This factor does not seem to be hurting Liberals in terms of votes across the country. People turning from the Conservatives to the Liberals or normal Liberals are simply justifying their election day intentions on terms other than leadership. Nevertheless, it does underline the electorate's uneasiness about the subject. In Alberta, however, Thompson acts in a small way as a rationalization to desert the Conservatives and to vote Social Credit.

'He Has New Ideas'

In Wetaskiwin, the 27-year-old wife of a waterworks operator, who supported Diefenbaker twice before, typified the Alberta pattern. She claimed that she liked Thompson because "he has new ideas. He speaks well and seems sincere. Frankly, I'm fed up with both Pearson and Diefenbaker and I'm not usually Social Credit either. My husband says he's not going to vote he's so fed up with politics right now. I'm getting that way, too."

She went on: "You know, I don't know very much about politics. But you can't help learning something with that thing (pointing to her TV set) on all the time."

Generally, however, what loss to the Socialists the Tories are experiencing primarily represents a return to previous affiliations and is attributable to this and not to Thompson himself. All are Social Credit voters provincially. This is not especially significant in itself. After all, 61 out of the 65 seats in the provincial legislature are held by Premier Manning's forces.

What is of importance is Manning's role in the campaign. If he goes all out in the federal cause, this could have some effect.

While concern over leadership forms the backdrop against which present political dispositions must be seen, an analysis of the individual parties' seat possibilities must consider the operation of such variables as income, residence, candidate loyalty and traditional affiliations.

The party standings at dissolution were as follows: Conservatives 15, Socialists two. The Liberals and the NDP were shut out.

It appears as if Liberal chances for gaining from the Conservatives are, not surprisingly, in the two upper-middle and upper income urban ridings of the province, Calgary South and Edmonton West.

Lava Engulfs 1,000 Homes

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A volcano eruption Sunday on the island of Bali killed 150 persons and destroyed more than 1,000 homes in a 22-mile radius, Gov. Sumarno announced Wednesday.

The government official, who also heads the Indonesian Red Cross Society, said 250,000 residents of Bali will be evacuated from the area of 5,700-foot Gunung Agung, or majestic mountain. He said about 100 persons were injured in the eruption.

In Calgary South, the Grits have to overcome a 9,000-vote margin which was run up by Conservative Art Smith last June. The area covered by the riding has been Tory with but one exception since Alberta entered Confederation. However, Smith is not a candidate this time and the Liberals have a proven vote-getter in Calgary Mayor Harry Hays.

If Smith were in the race, Hays would not have a hope in spite of his popularity. But candidate considerations aside, the voters in this constituency, like their counterparts across Canada in such areas as Vancouver South, Winnipeg South, Eglinton and Westmount, are violently anti-Diefenbaker and are determined to oust the present government at all costs. They are also dreadfully concerned about the question of stable government.

Vote for Stability

A traditional Tory, an Elbow Park small businessman, summed up the general attitude never good, especially for a small country. The whole picture for this country is bad. Of course, my whole outlook is conservative or free enterprise. But Mr. Diefenbaker proved himself to be a failure. I can't see Social Credit. That leaves Mr. Pearson. I think he made a wonderful external affairs minister. Whether he has the ability to lead a party, I extremely doubt. But I'll vote Liberal as far as federal is concerned. I feel we require stable government and the job is to choose the party that will give it to us."

The collapse of Conservative support and the stampede toward the Liberals is pronounced. The only question is whether the large deficit will prove too much for Hays to overcome.

Breakaway Unabated

The same issues exercising Calgary South voters are significant in Edmonton West. Last year, former Liberal provincial chief Harper Prowse chopped Conservative Marcel Lambert's 22,393 plurality down to 2,932. The breakaway in Prowse's favor has continued unabated. Were it not for the substantial lower-middle income population of the riding, and the fact that it contains some rural voters, Lambert would be totally lost. As it is, this constituency appears to be the surest Liberal gain in the province.

As for the other urban ridings, the population of Edmonton West is lower-middle and lower income. It had the lowest turnout in Alberta, 66 per cent, compared with the provincial aggregate of 74 per cent. This denotes low interest and this is typical behavior for such groups in the U.S. as well as Canada.

Will Not Change

The stability of commitment here is unbelievably high. Not one of my samples of 22 expressed an intention to change affiliation on April 8. The odds are heavy that Social Credit hopes for a gain from the Conservatives are baseless. At the moment the riding is not even remotely a Liberal possibility.

Because of the middle income and partially rural character of Edmonton-Strathcona, it appears as if this seat will also remain in Tory hands despite outgoing MP Terry Nugent's personal difficulties.

Calgary North is one riding in which the nuclear issue is of some significance. This is Douglas Harkness' seat and he has held it since 1945. He has "his constituents" well trained. If they do not like his nuclear stand (and there are some who do not), they admire him for being a man of principle.

Even his opponents should be surprised if they salvage their deposits.

Still In Debt From 1962 Vote

GALT, Ont. (UPI) — The Social Credit Association in the riding of Waterloo South said Tuesday it can't afford to enter a candidate in the April general election because it is still in debt from the June, 1962, election.

'Charity Begins At Home'

HAMILTON (CP)—The 30 Canadian chapters of the Sweet Adelines, an international barbershop quartet group for women, are being asked to secede from the parent body and set up a Canadian organization with no color bars.

Frances Begin, president of the Hamilton chapter, said Wednesday night letters have gone out from the 40-member Hamilton group to all other chapters in Canada seeking to start a strictly Canadian organization.

Earlier, the chapter voted to leave the international body, unless it removes provisions from its constitution which prohibit all but "white girls of good moral character" from joining. The Sweet Adelines' international headquarters is in Tulsa, Okla.

Miss Begin said in an interview the Hamilton members found the ban on Negroes unbearable.

"We sing for charity and after all charity begins at home," she said. "We cannot really call ourselves charitable if we discriminate against a particular group of people."

Members of the group in Ottawa, Winnipeg and London, Ont., have also protested strongly against the discrimination.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Sharon Lee McGrath, age 12, of Feeding Hills, Mass., for her question:

How did the salt get in the Great Lake?

You can sit in the lake with your head and shoulders above the water. You can float with your toes in the air. In fact, you cannot sink yourself in Utah's Great Salt Lake. This is because the water is so full of dissolved salty chemicals.

Salt water, you might think, belongs in the seas, and it is strange to find a lake of saltier-than-sea-water way out in the desert of Northern Utah. The waters of the Great Salt Lake, it is estimated, contain about six times more salty chemicals than normal sea water. Yet the geologists tell us that this was once a fresh water lake.

The size of the salty lake varies with the seasons, but, on the average, it is about 50 miles wide and 75 miles long. This is as large as Lake Huron, but the ancient lake of Utah was 10 times this size. We have named it Lake Bonneville, and thousands of years ago it glistened with sparkling fresh water.

Lake Bonneville stayed fresh, because its waters drained through the Snake and Columbia Rivers into the Pacific Ocean. Later the geography changed, and this outlet to the sea was sealed off. The streams and rivers brought less and less water into the lake, and the area shrank.

The so-called fresh water of the rivers has but a fraction of the salty chemicals found in sea water. But some chemicals are dissolved and carried away by every stream that runs over the ground. Through the ages, the drying Lake Bonneville gathered more and more of these chemicals and had no way to empty its salty waters into the sea. Finally it became the Great Salt Lake, which is getting saltier with every season.

NEW YORK—Bob Hope got the USO award at a dinner here where the preliminary speeches were so interminable that the crowd began muttering. "I thought," Hope said, when he finally got on at the Astor, "that I would have to receive this award posthumously. It's the first thing I got from the USO that I didn't get in a needle. I won't make much of a speech. It seems silly to go to a lot of trouble when there's only one newspaper publishing."

Bandleader Nat Brandwynne could give him little rehearsal time because he was too busy rehearsing the stars of the show, Walter O'Keefe and Sheila Barrett. I was a young columnist, Toots Shor was a young saloonist. We were at the ringside. B'way publicist Ted Howard reminded me of the date.

Frankie was the opening act, of course—if I'm not mistaken. Life Magazine had already anticipated his success and had his slim boyish face on its cover.

Experts Answer Queries on Love

By JACK HUTTON

As everyone knows after reading magazine stories or watching the late-late movies on TV, young people in love sit around sighing and turning paler every hour.

They can't help, in fact, feeling sorry as heck for them. I remember one story in which a young heroine died so much pining that, despite all efforts of her family, she was a near-goner before the hero came back from some long trip.

Or there was the cowboy (one of the few not in love with his horse) who squinted at the setting sun and said, "I'll always be in love with you, Miss Betsy, even though you just married Banker Bill."

Pure nonsense, and the cowboy reading his lines must have known it. You and I both know that if hadn't already got three other girls on the string, he would have before wash-up time Tuesday.

Pure Hokum

Probably no other generation in history has been baraged by so much pure hokum about the emotions of love as your generation now is. Imagine the poor soul who took popular songs seriously!

The experts who study what makes us tick have produced answers that vary a great deal from what you will see in a TV love story. For example:

Question: Is there only one Right Person for me?

Answer: Hogwash. If there were, then a poor fellow in Saskatchewan would wait all his life, not knowing the right girl was in St. John's, Nfld. Or what if she were in New Zealand?

Q. Can I predict what kind of a person I'll marry?

A. The psychologists say "yes" to this one, with qualifications.

One American study went far enough out on a limb to predict that there is one chance in three that the future "one-and-only" lives within five blocks of you.

In other words, you'll probably marry someone of the same religion; someone who went roughly the same distance in school, someone of your own nationality, and someone with the same tastes.

Q. What if I don't swoon every time he enters the room? Shouldn't I lose my appetite, or get moody or something spectacular?

A. Not unless you're a type who does that all the time. An English survey of girls in love recently found the girls were having fewer colds than other people.

Psychologists and physicians say that being in love has a different effect than most people expect. People in love, they say, often find they can study harder, work harder, and have more energy than usual.

Q. Am I out of my mind, or a fickle type if I happen to have a crush on more than one person at a time?

A. Not at all, according to the experts. Two out of every three girls find themselves in a situation like this sometime in their teens. But it gets complicated if you feel this way about four or more!

Q. How do you tell the difference between a crush and the real thing?

A. The experts list these clues. Do you feel "at-home" with the other person? Do you respect the other person, and feel the same-way about plans and interests? Do you

Support Birds

Water evaporates from the surface of the great lake, especially in the warm summer. In the process, liquid water becomes gaseous vapor and molecules of water become molecules of gas which float up to join the other invisible gases of the air. But the dissolved chemicals are not changed into gases. So the water evaporates and leaves them behind.

You can still find some of the shores and beaches of old Lake Bonneville, far from the Great Salt Lake. There are also sparkling white salt flats where the old lake gradually shrank and disappeared, leaving its load of glistening chemicals lying on the ground.

There are several islands in the Great Salt Lake, and it is no surprise to learn that they have beaches with sand. Herons and pelicans, gulls and cormorants nest on these islands. The highest is Antelope Island where there is grass enough for sheep and cattle, plus a herd of buffalo.

The lake supports a blue-green algae, brine shrimp and the grubs of certain water flukes, but no fish live in its salty waters.

Andy sends a Hammond's Nature Atlas of America to George Holway, age 13, of St. Louis, Mo., for his question:

What kind of a bird is the albatross?

The giant of the albatross family has a wingspread of 11 feet, yet its slender wings are only inches wide. He is a sizable sea-going bird who tips the scales at about 25 pounds. Were it not for his great wings, you might mistake him for a seagull. The male is white with black-tipped pinions, and the female may wear a few patches of brown.

The albatross can hover in the air and soar for hours, often so high that he is out of sight. With a good wind, it is estimated that he can fly at 100 miles an hour. Most of his time is spent in the air.

He comes down to the sea for his food and sometimes rests, sitting like a duck on the water.

FABULOUSLY PHOTOGRAPHED MOVIE

Lawrence Leaves One Wondering

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
VANCOUVER — The men who made "The Bridge on the River Kwai" have done the same kind of job on the fabulous Lawrence of Arabia as they did on the eccentric British colonel who built a bridge and then destroyed it—they leave you wondering if you like Lawrence or not!

This turbulent British movie, directed by David Lean and produced by Sam Spiegel, presents Lawrence as a frustrated idealist who was also an incurable egotist—a man who exalted in his originality and couldn't bear to be thought of as other men.

This is subtly but forcefully suggested in Peter O'Toole's portrayal of a historic figure whose personality has been analysed and fought over ever since his farewell in a motor cycle crash in 1935.

And the characterization survives the almost shattering impact of the movie itself, with its extra-large 70-millimetre screen, thunderous symphonic music and breath-taking desert panoramas.

The word "great" is much abused these days, but it can be fitly applied to the three-and-a-half hour epic which was given its Western Canada premiere before a fashionable audience in Vancouver's new Odeon Theatre on Granville Street Wednesday night.

The 700 guests paid $5 a seat for the privilege and their money is being donated by Odeon to the Vancouver International Festival. The new theatre, a reconstruction of the old Plaza (and before that the Maple Leaf), was officially opened by C. B. Salmon, president of Odeon Theatres (Canada) Ltd.

One interesting aspect of the film is that Patrick O'Toole, a comparatively unknown Irish actor, was picked to play Lawrence while the supporting roles were given to such famous personalities as Alec Guinness, Jose Ferrer, Anthony Quinn, Claude Rains, Jack Hawkins and Anthony Quayle.

"UN-ENGLISH"
Alec Guinness (who once played Lawrence on the stage) is remarkably effective and amazingly "un-English" in the role of Prince Faisal. But Jack Hawkins' interpretation of General Allenby (Lawrence's commander-in-chief) does not conform with what we have read of him.

It is the portrait of a cynic rather than a statesmanlike soldier, who at least understood what Lawrence was trying to accomplish.

Claude Rains—an old master of the quiet philosophical role—is at his best as Dryden, Allenby's devious political advisor, and Anthony Quayle is every inch the old-type British colonel who clings to the admirably inadequate code of military obedience.

Omar Sheriff, a favorite with eastern movie-goers, is introduced to Western audiences as Sheikh Ali Ibn el Kharish.

The photography, directed by Frederick Young, is so effective that, the day after the premiere, a man said: "I still feel as if I had sand in my hair."

SCOPE AND COLOR
It is phenomenal in scope and color—a remarkable documentary of the Arabian desert in all its moods.

Then there is the charging, ferocious music of Maurice Jarre, interpreted by the London Philharmonic Orchestra under Sir Adrian Boult.

The central theme is a haunting melody which could well be a popular song if suitable words were found for it.

Four years of planning and 19 months of shooting went into the production of "Lawrence of Arabia," and the cast runs into thousands.

A spokesman for Odeon Theatres said the movie cannot be shown in Victoria because no local theatre is equipped for the new 70-millimetre Panavision.

Minimum Wage Hike Requested

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Federation of Labor Tuesday asked the Board of Industrial Relations to set a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for office workers.

It told the board this rate is "absolutely essential to bring all workers at least within reach of a basic standard of living."

The board reserved decision. The present minimum wage is 75 cents an hour. Based on a 35-hour week this produces $115.50 a month, for a 40-hour week $132 a month.

The federation said these are inadequate and fall far short of the basic minimum needs of an individual, let alone a family.

LOOKS AT SPORTS

Eddie Dorohoy is mellowing.

The wind hasn't gone out of his tonsils and he isn't ready to join the Silver Threads Club. But talking to him Tuesday in the Dorohoy manse, kept meticulous and antiseptic by general manager Shirley, he came across as perceptive Mr. Dorohoy rather than rambunctious Master Dorohoy.

Nearly everybody liked the old model... cocky, quick-lipped, an eternal boy with a touch of arrogance. But the new Dorohoy isn't difficult to take either. Somewhere he has learned tolerance, found balance, developed understanding. On him they look good.

He had just returned from Knoxville, Tennessee, after playing 18 games in the Eastern Hockey League. Five years ago, toe-skating along with the cream of the Western Hockey Alliance, he didn't know where Knoxville was. Three years ago he would have laughed at the thought of playing in cities like Greensboro or Clinton or Nashville.

A body-check changed all that. Les Hun, of Seattle delivered it. Dorohoy was the catcher. When he tried to get up off the ice he couldn't. His right ankle was broken in three places.

Four operations left him knut but wobbly. Still he was the same Dorohoy, the crew-cut kid who could conquer the world even with one leg.

Vancouver Canucks watched him this year and decided he couldn't cut it any more. Offers trickled in—a coaching job at Olds, Alberta; a stint with an Austrian team; a chance to play at Knoxville.

A Journeyman's Honest Appraisal

It must have hurt him inside to realize that Dorohoy, once with Montreal Canadiens, a coach in the WHL at 21, one of the most colorful players in the business, no longer aroused the metabolism of coaches everywhere. If he was bothered, he buried his discomfort behind his usual glib facade.

Finally he chose Knoxville. "I need ice, time to prove myself again," he said.

What did the Knoxville experiment prove? "I had lots of ice," he said. "But when you break a leg as often as I did you don't come back smelling daisies."

He talked broadly about the league before talking about Dorohoy.

"They play pretty fair hockey—better than I thought... In the southern division the rinks are beautiful... About three years old, they hold from 5,000 to 10,000 in theatre seats... Except for a few $1 seats tickets are scaled from $2 to $3.50... In Knoxville we averaged 3,500 over 31 games... The refereeing isn't ideal and the linesman miss a few... But you must remember that they lack experience... In time it will improve."

If You Drive You Rate In Philly

"Each team carries 13 men instead of 15 and 16 in the pro leagues... Makes it tough... One night we played Greensboro and bodies were falling all over the place... I looked down our bench and counted nine... Then I looked over at Greensboro... They had only eight men... I played, centre, left wing, defence and on the point... We won 6-5."

"Lots of promising kids down there... Ray Cullen—he's a younger brother of Brian and Barry who played for Toronto—scored 67 goals for us... Bob Bailey—he was with Frisco for a spell—is another."

"Travelling was difficult... Every team goes by bus... We were luckier than most... Had bunks in our bus... But it's 900 miles from Knoxville to Philadelphia and we made three trips up north... Once we played seven games in eight nights and then drove back to Knoxville for one game before heading north for three more."

"I remember asking our manager 'what nut drew up this schedule?' He just looked at me and said 'I did.'"

"We were luckier than Philadelphia... They used an old school bus... We had a driver but they had three players taking turns at the wheel... When I saw Hugh Currie, he coached them. I asked him about it. 'If you don't have a B licence,' he said, 'you can't make this club.'"

There Are Other Things In Life

There was a time when asking Dorohoy if he intended to play hockey next season was as superfluous as asking Jayne Mansfield if she favored exposing her décolletage. Still it had to be asked.

"I don't know," he said. "There may be openings—player-coach or manager-coach openings—next year at Greensboro, Nashville, and Long Island. The people of Tennessee were good to me but I'm not fussy about living there."

"I thought a lot about my future in Vancouver last fall. The people who owned the hotel I stayed at—they operate 19 hotels in B.C.—asked me if I wanted to learn the business. I did some work for them and I enjoyed it. They also offered to help if I wanted to get into public relations with a distillery."

"They said I didn't have to rush into these things and they frankly told me I wouldn't earn as much at least right away as I could in hockey. They were honest about everything and now I have to be honest with myself and my family."

The kitchen door opened and his youngest daughter, Lynn, walked in. "Hi, daddy," she said.

"Hi, champion," he said, relaxed and smiling.

Maybe Knoxville wasn't the end of the world for Eddie Dorohoy. Maybe it was just the beginning.

Junior Tourney On Rugby Slate

Oval-ball action should be fast and furious at Macdonald Park Saturday afternoon.

On tap is the Victoria Rugby Union's seven-a-side junior tournament, which has attracted entries from 15 clubs.

Open to boys under 17 on last Jan. 1, the tourney will move along at a brisk pace after the opening kickoff at 1:15. Playing on two fields, the youngsters will scamper through games at 15-minute intervals and will complete 22 matches in approximately three and one-half hours.

Consolation final is scheduled for 4:10 and the championship final at 4:30.

First round matches: Oak Bay Wanderers vs. Central Junior High School, Brentwood College vs. Esquimalt, 1:15; Cowichan vs. Mount View, Nanaimo vs. Gordon Head, 1:30; Mount Douglas vs. Chemainus, Shawnigan Lake School vs. Victoria High School, 1:45; George Bonner High vs. University School, Saanich Specials vs. Oak Bay High, 2:00.

League officers: Robert Sproule, president; Wilf Taylor, Herb Hodgkinson, Gerry Lister, vice-presidents; Adam Cochrane, treasurer; Ken Courtney, players' agent; equipment manager and statistician, Mrs. Kay Ireland, concessions, and Mrs. Gwen Russell, publicity.

Little Goes a Long Way

Small men usually don't wield much influence in rebounds but Vinnie Ernst is no average little man. One of collegiate basketball's smallest players at 5' 8", Ernst climbed an invisible ladder at New York to grab a rebound from 7' 1" Mike McCoy of Miami. Ernst's contributions helped Providence overcome Miami 106-96. Other Miami players are Carl Stavroti (11) and Jack Spisak (31). (AP Wirephoto.)

Liston Wasn't Kidding—Knee Requires Knife

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—

A knee operation will put heavyweight champion Sonny Liston out of action for at least six months. He may not fight again until next year.

The return bout with Floyd Patterson, which has been hanging by a thread for several weeks, was postponed indefinitely Wednesday night by the Miami Boxing Commission, after an official examination that revealed damage to the cartilage in Liston's left knee.

"It is our opinion that this knee should have the benefit of surgical procedure," said a report by Dr. A. H. Weiland, widely known orthopedic surgeon who made the examination.

"We have found unmistakable evidence of the injury to the medial semi-lunar cartilage and feel that it would be unwise for him to participate in the boxing match scheduled for April 10," Dr. Weiland's report said.

It would take at least six months for the knee to heal after such an operation, Dr. Weiland said.

When the rematch with Patterson will be fought now is up to Liston. Where it will be is up to Patterson, who has the right in the return bout to name the site.

PATTERSON GOES HOME

Patterson closed his Tropical Park training camp Tuesday night and began an automobile trip to his home in New York. His adviser, Julius November, said Patterson had given no thought to a future site for the rematch, nor to whether he would take on another opponent while Liston is recuperating.

Al Bolan, general manager of Championship Sports, said re-funding of about $7,400 received in ticket sales would start today. Bolan said cancellation of the Miami Beach date would cost the promoters in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Talk started immediately of a possible match between Patterson and the young contender, Cassius Clay.

"I don't feel so good," Liston moaned when he walked out of Dr. Weiland's office after the hour-long examination which he had returned from Chicago to undergo on orders from the boxing commission.

His knee, originally injured when he swung a golf club, apparently was recovering when he hurt it again March 13.

Less than two hours after the examination, a glum Liston climbed on a plane and returned to his Chicago home.

Can Legion Gals Finally Capture Elusive Crown?

Victoria basketball teams have collected most major provincial titles in the past two decades.

In fact, they have missed only one—the senior "B" women's crown.

Coach Wally Yeaman and his Trafalgar Legion girls believe this is the year the city's list of hoop titles could be completed.

Trafalgars, queens of the coast senior "B" women's hoop realm, go gunning for the elusive title at Central Junior High School Friday and Saturday, meeting Trail in a two-game, total-points provincial final.

They expect a bitter battle, but Trafalgars looked the part of potential champions last weekend when they flashed power and finesse to breeze past the Vancouver champions and add the coast crown to their city and Island diadems.

Eddys Near Cup Victory

Eddys are only a tie game away from the Memorial Cup second division soccer championship.

They tripped Drakes 3-1 at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday night, meet Oak Bay at Central Park Sunday at 2 p.m. in the last game of the round-robin competition.

Jack Breuker scored twice and Eddie Kop once. Hank Roodbol scored for Drakes.

WITH FONTINATO'S PROGRESS

Medics Highly Pleased

MONTREAL (CP)—Doctors said Wednesday they are "immensely pleased" with the progress of Lou Fontinato, Montreal Canadiens' defenceman who fractured his neck in a hockey game here March 9.

Fontinato underwent a 7½-hour operation last Friday. Chips of broken bone were removed, and two pieces of bone from his hip fused to the spine as a support. Pressure on the nerves and spinal cord was removed.

Dr. Douglas C. Kinnear, treating the 31-year-old defenceman in Montreal General Hospital, said Wednesday: "Lou's condition continues to show general improvement following the major surgical procedure of last Friday. He enjoyed his most comfortable night last night since entering the hospital."

The doctor was unwilling to say yet whether Fontinato will ever play again.

Fontinato was carried from the rink in a state of paralysis after falling headlong into the boards. The paralysis has still not left his arms completely.

'Undeserved' Tie Gives Leafs Title

Imlach's Gamble, Broken Stick, Keon Tells Tale

Punch Imlach's gamble, a broken stick and the payoff touch of little Dave Keon Wednesday night gave Toronto Maple Leafs their first National Hockey League championship in 15 years.

Before a hometown crowd of 14,372 the Leafs couldn't beat Montreal Canadiens but they salvaged a 3-3 sawoff and that was good enough.

Each club plays two more games and both Montreal and Chicago Black Hawks could tie Toronto in points. But the marbles go to the team with the most wins—the Leafs.

In the other game Wednesday night the Rangers dumped Boston Bruins 5-1 before 8,155 fans in New York, getting three goals from Vic Hadfield, who scored only twice in 34 previous games.

Keon's second goal of the game—with eight seconds left to play—tied it for Toronto.

SAYS LEAFS UNWORTHY

The mild-mannered centre from Noranda, Que., a swift 163-pounder, was candid about it later in the dressing room: "We didn't deserve it," he said.

"We stopped skating and they didn't. In the last five minutes of the third period I thought we'd blown it."

Coach-manager Imlach was less unassuming. He said of his crew:

"As the highest-paid club in the league they should be expected to finish first. That's what we're paying them for."

But he admitted he was concerned before Keon popped the puck by Montreal's goalie Jacques Plante from a scramble in front with Dick Duff and Bob Nevin drawing assists.

Punch yanked goalie Don Simmons in favor of a sixth attacker for the final minute of play—a move that frequently backfires.

This time it paid off partly because Montreal's Henri Richard—sent out by coach Toe Blake to help repel the Toronto thrust—broke his stick.

THEY STOLE PUCK

"I tried to fall on the puck to kill play, they dug it out from under me," said Richard later.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead, then wilted. The Canadiens came back with three goals, two by Ralph Backstrom and one by Dickie Moore. Bob Pufford was the other Toronto goal-getter.

While the Canadiens were stymied in their bid for a sixth consecutive league championship, they equalled an NHL record Wednesday's tie was the club's 22nd this season. The Maple Leafs had the same number in 1954-55.

The result left Chicago's Glenn Hall with a three-goal lead over Plante in the Vezina Trophy competition and a four-goal edge over Toronto's Johnny Bower, being rested.

BATHGATE ADVANCES

In the other game, Hadfield counted a goal in each period and teammate Andy Bathgate collected three assists, running his season's point total to 78, five behind league leader Gordie Howe of Detroit.

Andy Heberton and Camille Henry also scored for New York in the final 20 minutes. It was Henry's 34th of the season, tying him with Bathgate for the club goals lead.

The Boston marksman was Forbes Kennedy. He was set up by John Bucyk and Tom Williams in the third period.

FOR DUNCAN TRIO

Dormans Need Good Antidote

Dormans are going to have to do something about the line of Wayne Anderson-Bobby Harris-Toby Wilson.

This trio was potent poison for the Clothiers Wednesday at the Memorial Arena, collecting 19 points as Dormans won the first game of the Independent Commercial Hockey League playoffs 10-6.

Second game of the best-of-three final will be played Sunday at 4:30 p.m.

Anderson rifled in six goals, added two assists; Harris was three and four, and Wilson assisted four times. Metro-Kaplanchuk potted the other goal for Dormans.

SCORING BURST

Anderson put on a scintillating scoring burst in the third period. With the score tied 5-5 he wheeled in three goals within five minutes. Harris hastily added the 9-5 goal and then Anderson checked in with his fourth of the period.

Dormans got two goals from B. McFarlane and singles from Del-Pettinger, Jack Lundquist, Randy Ferbey and George Fisher.

Triple Title Show Just for Audience

OWEN TAKES SYRACUSE JOB

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Steve Owen, former coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Western Football Conference, will be coach and general manager of Syracuse Stormers, of the United Football League, next season.

Owen coached the Saskatchewan entry in the Canadian Football League last year.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Boxing's championship triple-header, rained out of its first scheduled date, tries again to night at Dodger Stadium, with welterweight King Emile Griffith meeting Luis Rodriguez in the feature.

"Mostly, clear," was the weatherman's forecast, yet promoters still kept their fingers crossed after the postponement last Saturday night cost them an estimated $100,000.

Down the drain with the rain went the $70,000 television guarantee. Tonight's show is scheduled for the audience in the huge baseball field.

Opening the title action at 8 p.m. PST are Griffith, the 147-pound champion from New York, and Rodriguez, the Cuban exile.

Davey Moore, then, defends his featherweight crown against Sugar Ramos, another Cuban refugee, now living in Mexico City, while Raymundo (Battling) Torres of Mexico fights Roberto Cruz of the Philippines for the vacant junior welterweight title.

All three fights are scheduled for 15 rounds.

CALGARY ACQUISITION

CALGARY—Calgary's football Stampede has signed Lono Irvin, a 200-pound halfback from California.

Harry Jerome Running Again

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sprinter Harry Jerome is running again on the leg he injured at the British Empire Games in Perth, Australia.

He says the torn quadriceps muscle in his left leg is responding as well as can be expected.

He jogs about a mile a day and exercises with a five-pound iron shoe.

Jerome, a student at the University of Oregon, said he cannot estimate when he will run competitively or in time trials.

MP Urges Outlawing Pro Hockey C Forms

TORONTO (CP)—A New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature Wednesday urged that the signing of teen-age hockey players to National Hockey League clubs under "C" form contracts be outlawed.

Kenneth Bryden (NDP-Toronto-Woodbine), said NHL clubs using the "C" form contracts are "trafficking in the youth of this country."

Mr. Bryden said: "These teen-age boys are beguiled into thinking they have a career in professional hockey... promising junior players are uprooted from their homes and made to play exhausting schedules."

Labor Minister Rowntree said Mr. Bryden's statements would be looked into.

By signing a player to a "C" form, a NHL club obtains exclusive rights to him. The boy, if he wishes to play organized hockey, must play for the team designated by the NHL club.

Five-Man Group Gets Titan Team

NEW YORK (AP)—Five wealthy executives, all prominent in thoroughbred racing, have obtained control of the bankrupt New York Titans of the American Football League for $1,000,000.

Approval of the sale was made by John E. Joyce, federal bankruptcy referee.

Campus Spy Recruiters Under Keen Eye of RCMP

OTTAWA (CP)—RCMP Commissioner C. W. Harverson says his force keeps tabs on Canadian university activities because the Communists try to recruit undercover agents on college campuses.

"It is the job of the RCMP to know where subversion is and attack espionage wherever it is found," the commissioner said in a copyright interview with Canadian University Press for its member papers at universities across the country.

"If we think it is found on the university campuses, we have to go there," he said.

Amplifying in an interview with The Canadian Press, the commissioner said that investigation of communism on college campuses is not connected in any way with the force's university education program for selected personnel.

Under this program, inaugurated in the 1930s, RCMP men attend university as students, staying through to graduation in courses of a kind likely to contribute to their police work.

The commissioner said these students register openly as RCMP personnel and make no secret of the connection.

SOME SUCCESS

In the C.U.P. interview, Commissioner Harverson said the Communist effort to recruit scientists and government leaders while they are university students has been "at least partially successful." A university-trained man was more useful to the Communists than a non-university man because it was more likely the former would gain access to information.

Commissioner Harverson said it is not unknown for foreign intelligence officers to attempt to recruit students to work for Russia.

The RCMP reported to government departments on persons seeking employment in "sensitive" branches. RCMP responsibility ceased there. The hiring was up to the department itself.

"In the university community, inquiries we make into a student's background are often directed at professors," the commissioner said.

INFLUENCE OPINION

"We think there are 40 more responsible persons than university professors and it would be a bad day when the security program of this country could not rely on their support."

There were about 3,500 card-carrying Communist party members in Canada. But these were not the RCMP's main source of concern.

"A very important segment of the party is not card-carrying, as this would make it known to the public. This group forms what the Communist themselves term their 'underground movement.' These people are able, because of this anonymity, to get into organizations and influence opinion."

Forest Park Plan Again Postponed

The much-ballyhooed Sherwood Forest proposal has been put off for a second year in a row, promoter Milton Tisdale revealed Wednesday night.

An enabling bylaw, establishing commercial recreational park zoning, was rushed through council early this year at Mr. Tisdale's request so the amusement park could be in operation this summer on Gorge Road.

But the whole plan has been delayed another year, Mr. Tisdale said, to allow planning for an expansion of the original scheme after consultation with Disneyland officials in Los Angeles.

He said Cuyler Shanks has been appointed business manager for the amusement park and work should begin this winter.

Last year Mr. Tisdale announced a delay after he was unsuccessful in obtaining rezoning by Saanich council of a city-owned woodlot on the Gorge.

Four Candidates Questioned On Jobs, Nuclear Weapons

Esquimalt-Saanich election candidates stood up to a running fire of questions on unemployment and Canada's nuclear arms policy when they addressed an all-candidate meeting in the community hall at Cobble Hill Wednesday night.

The meeting, sponsored by South Cowichan Ratepayers' Association, drew a lively audience of nearly 200, and there were occasional shouting matches across the hall.

Liberal candidate Robert Ostler said he supported Lester Pearson's "sane, conscientious" policy on nuclear arms, and assured questioners the Liberal party would give "top priority" to the unemployment problem if it was elected government on April 8.

"We will inject new life into industry and enact necessary social and economic legislation as we have done in the past," he said. "All the progressive social legislation that is in effect in Canada today is the result of Liberal administration."

MAJOR DEPRESSION

Mr. Ostler said it is often forgotten that Canada's Liberal government weathered a major depression during its 22 years in office.

Conservative contender George Chatterton said the solution to unemployment is to encourage secondary industries in Canada. He claimed Prime Minister Diefenbaker's government has done more for Canada than any other administration, and if returned to office, would take constructive steps to attract secondary industries and stabilize the economy.

"Would you outline what you have done for the Esquimalt-Saanich riding?" asked a man in the audience.

'ALL NIGHT'

There were answering shouts of "That would take all night!" "Nothing." "You know what he's done" and "What about the airport terminal?"

New Democratic Party candidate John Windsor said unemployment could be eliminated by introducing an adequate school, road, housing and hospital building program and setting up a Canada development fund.

"We have had Liberal and Conservative governments for nearly 100 years," he said, "and they haven't been able to solve the problem. It is time we had new ideas." Social Credit candidate Edward Lum said it took an economic crisis to elect a Social Credit government in Alberta in 1935, and economic chaos to elect a Social Credit government in B.C. in 1952.

"The fact both these administrations are still in power is proof of what they have done," he declared, "and the time is now ripe for a Social Credit administration in Ottawa."

"Which side of your party do you support on nuclear arms for Canada—Mr. Thompson or Mr. Caouette?" he was asked.

"Mr. Thompson," answered Mr. Lum, referring to national Secord Leader Robert Thompson.

To the question: "Is Canada's Conservative Party anti-American?" Mr. Chatterton replied:

"Certainly not—they are our friends and neighbors; but there is a time when Canadians must make their own decisions without interference from a larger power. We must stand up for ourselves."

COMMITMENTS

Asked if he personally favored nuclear arms in Canada, Mr. Ostler answered:

"As an individual, I am against nuclear arms. But I do feel that, if we do not live up to our commitments with our neighbors, we cannot expect anyone to put any faith in us as a nation."

For the NDP party, Mr. Windsor said Canada has wasted "millions of dollars" on obsolete weapons, yet had no real standing as a military power.

He said American investment in Canada should be stopped "before we lose control of our country."

Mr. Chatterton told questioners the Conservative party stands "opposed to having nuclear weapons on Canadian soil except in war-time."

Columbia 'Hold-up' Blamed on Opposition

FOUR MILLS LATEST PEACE POWER ESTIMATE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, said yesterday the latest estimate of the average cost of Peace River power delivered in Vancouver is four mills per kilowatt hour.

He told the Vancouver Canadian Club that B.C. energy board consultants estimate the average cost of Peace energy delivered in Vancouver initially will be eight mills for the first year of operation.

But, he said, the first year's operating costs were not significant in the over-all picture and the final average cost would be in the four-mill range.

Dr. Shrum said the cost getting the mighty Peace River project into power production would be $427,400,000 between 1961 and 1968, when it was scheduled to go into initial power production. The plant would not be at full operating capacity until 1973.

Point of Order Disrupts Order

Premier Bennett took on the opposition single-handedly during a squalid of scathing cross-fire that erupted in the legislature Wednesday after David Barrett (NDP-Dewdney) touched a sore spot on the Social Credit hide.

Mr. Barrett was referring to Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Ray Williston's answer to an NDP charge of extra expense and needless haste in B.C. hydro-electric development.

If the minister could not refute the argument advanced by the opposition he should at least give reasons, Mr. Barrett said.

And if he could not do this, the government should "stand up and say (the policy) is to preserve the political position of Social Credit."

The minister rose just as Randolph Harding (NDP-Kaslo-Slocan) got up with another question about B. C. Hydro, which the premier said should be put before the minister gave his reply.

John Squire (NDP-Alberni) criticized Mr. Bennett for the instruction.

"The premier has no right to tell a member when to speak or on what subject."

"You're not at a union meeting now," the premier fired back, a reference to Mr. Squire's job as business representative for International Woodworkers of America.

"Any union meetings I've been at are run a darn sight better than this place," Mr. Squire rejoined as shouting developed on both sides of the house.

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, who had missed the early part of the exchange, slipped back into his seat in time to berate the premier for "casting aspersions on the trade unions of B.C."

Then, with both premier and opposition leader on their feet, they jostled for recognition, on a point of order, by William Speare (SC-Cariboo), deputy chairman of the committee of supply.

"Point of order," Mr. Strachan said.

"No. My point of order," the premier said.

"Point of order," Mr. Strachan repeated.

The premier started talking. "He's making a political speech," the opposition cried.

Mr. Bennett stammered a report about his position as a leader of the house, then sat down.

"The real reason for his hysterical outburst is that the people of British Columbia are on to him and he knows he's through," Mr. Strachan replied in measured tones.

"The premier has just made a mockery of the rules of this house," Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane put in, his face drawn as he accused the premier. No point of order had been made at all, Mr. Macfarlane said.

Water Resources Minister Ray Williston Wednesday guaranteed Peace River power will be as cheap or cheaper than Columbia power.

He made the pledge in the legislature after getting exasperated with opposition criticism of his power policies.

Opposition members said his attitude was "terrible" because he would not answer their questions. He said their questions were fatuous and ludicrous.

Finally, they approved his $15,000 salary, and went through the rest of his departmental estimates before the end of the sitting at 6 p.m.

Mr. Williston also said once again that the government supports development of the Columbia River as well as the Peace.

"There is no more political hold-up on the Columbia project than has been engineered by the NDP," he charged.

The Peace project, with latest modifications, will deliver power to Vancouver as cheaply or cheaper than the Columbia, Mr. Williston said.

But, he added: "It's not a question of one or the other."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) accused the government of dooming the Columbia project.

"ONLY IN MINDS"

Mr. Williston replied that $9,000,000 had been spent on it and a further $35,000 a month is being spent. "It's only being doomed in the minds of the opposition."

He said they had been citing a fantastic series of figures designed only to confuse people.

He said they were peddling "political guff."

Liberal leader Ray Perrault said the government was being dishonest in its power policy because it had no idea of any markets for the Peace power. The Energy Board report after which the project went ahead was "predicated upon nothing but hot air."

Northern Social MLAs are not doing their job he charged. They should be on their feet in the House demanding to know what is going on.

Mr. Macdonald said he appreciated that the multi-million dollar project could not now be recalled; but still "content that a serious mistake has been made by this province" which would have a "tragic effect" on life for 15 or 20 years to come.

"UNDERCUT"

The government has "undercut Columbia negotiations by proceeding with the Peace, and from that time on the Columbia was doomed," Mr. Macdonald said.

Any development of the Columbia now would not benefit B.C. but the California market, he said.

"You cut yourself off from federal capital contributions and federal guarantees on borrowings," he told the government.

Leo Nimsick (NDP—Cranbrook) said it was not right to ask the people of B.C. to pay the extra cost of Peace development, besides making participation in world markets more difficult for industry through higher cost power, "just to satisfy a fetish."

Arthur Mayse

While no thinking person can ignore the potential of the dinn that escaped its bottle over Hiroshima, it occurs to me we may be using this bogey as a distraction from worries closer to home.

For Canadians, the most serious of these is or should be the possibility that 1967, instead of being our Confederation's centennial year, may find us trying to pick up the pieces of a broken Dominion.

Laugh this suggestion off as scare talk if you will. But I'm not laughing, nor are the reported five per cent of Quebecois who fervently wish to see their province divorced from English-speaking Canada.

"There they are, where they have no right to be!" Montcalm is quoted as exclaiming when he saw redcoats on the Plains of Abraham. That, today, remains the Separationist attitude.

These deluded people mean business. Unless someone somehow can lay Wolfe's 200-year-old ghost, their movements will continue to expand.

Easements for the nationalism-within-a-nation that is coming to a head in Quebec aren't hard to suggest.

One is a vastly augmented student and teacher exchange system, and this I heartily favor. But a panacea isn't a cure; and the good such mixing is limited. Also, its effects wouldn't be felt in depth for decades if not generations.

It has been argued to me, and brilliantly, that the fundamental cause of Quebec's isolationism is the "soft" peace offered by a conquering Britain through the Treaty of Paris.

The French should have been scattered as were Nova Scotia's Acadians. I've been told, and English enforced as Canada's single language.

Logical though such arguments may appear, they leave me unconvinced. As a Canadian of non-French extraction, I've always been proud of the peace that laid the groundwork for Canada as we know it. Without the Treaty of Paris, in fact, the Canada you and I inherited might never have been forged.

My friend Paul DuSault, the stone mason, is part of that Canada. So is his wife Therese and their daughter Clodette. These and others like them are dear to me. I can't think of their province as if it were a hostile foreign power. I don't want them to be hurt, or to hurt themselves.

I'm not leading up to any grandiose proposal for a settlement of this our most vexing national problem. Quite simply, I don't know how we're going to bring about true union in Canada.

Maybe we never can, since the problem is racial—emotional rather than economic. Whatever fair words may pass at the conference tables, I know the Quebec City caiche drivers are still going to insist the French were outnumbered 10 to one on that historic plain. Also that back-street Montreal kids will keep right on mis-calling each other "peasoupers" or "les Anglais" according to the racial heritage of each.

We don't have to agree in all things, however. Just in the determination to keep Canada one and indivisible.

In a vague and general way, I feel that the Quebec Separatist malaise, while not domestic since it affects the Dominion, must be dealt with by responsible elements within the province. These, the Liberal bourgeoisie whose attitudes have gone stubbornly unchanged from Laurier's day, I see as Quebec's and our chief hope for a continued federation.

Without Quebec, would Canada remain a nation? I don't think so. Cut the Maritimes off and they must sooner or later follow an older-than-Confederation affinity, adding themselves to New England. It's only half in jest, down there, that they describe Boston as "Canada's second city."

Ontario-New York, British Columbia-Alaska, or perhaps Washington. For the provinces between, union with their wheat-and-cattle neighbors.

And what of separated Quebec? Unable to stand alone, unacceptable as a colony of sufficiently-troubled France, she must also look south. Union with the United States would do what Confederation has never done—strip her of the right to her own language, and subject her to military draft for active overseas service. Even the most fanatic Separatist should find the price of a breakaway from English-speaking Canada high indeed!

Quebec has all to lose—including the baby bonus—and nothing to gain by secession. But she could still break Confederation; and I find even the remote possibility more worrisome than any other present threat.

Taking It on the Lamb

Spring officially started at 12:20 this morning and unofficially raised the thirst of Calypso, a French poodle pup owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. R. McMinn at 4867 Lochside. With the temperature hitting a balmy 59 at noon, Calypso horned in while Mrs. McMinn was feeding her two choice spring lambs. The noon temperature was actually 21 degrees higher than on March 21 last year. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Ledge-Perching Suspect Faces Trial Monday

City police constable J. L. Smith, on patrol on View Street shortly before 2 a.m. today, looked up and saw a figure perched on a second-storey window ledge of the T. Eaton Co. building.

The man was summoned to the sidewalk where he was arrested.

In city police court today Robert W. Woodford was charged with vagrancy, for failing to "justify his presence" on the side of the building.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was remanded to Monday for trial. He was released on $300 bail.

Fourth City Fire Hall Turned Down

City fire wardens committee today tentatively agreed $25,000 should be put into a fund to relocate Burnside fire hall but a proposal to add a fourth fire hall at Hillside and Quadra did not clear its first budget hurdle.

A preliminary summary of the proposed 1963 civic budget—excluding school and a few other items—showed that aldermen will be faced with paring an increase of $1,213,561 over last year's budget.

However finance committee, opening the budget-cutting grind, was told that the increase covered all projects suggested by civic officials for aldermen to select the ones that should be done this year. They were not expected to be done all at one time.

Fire warden's chairman Ald. A. I. Curtis said the city should relocate the Burnside firehall to an available site at John and Turner to give better protection to Victoria West and the industrial area at a gross cost of $65,000.

He also said a new firehall was needed to cover the north-east part of the city at Hillside and Quadra which would cost $150,000 for building, apparatus and 14 additional firemen needed to man the installation.

Mayor Wilson suggested $25,000 be put into a fund this year for relocating the Burnside firehall only.

Ald. Curtis said this would provide the relocation in two years or conceivably in one year if sale of the Burnside hall property and winter works grants were sufficient to make up the balance.

Earlier, Ald. Curtis made a general statement regarding the attitude council should take in tackling the budget this year.

He said that for many years, through depression and war periods, the city had to cut back on all needed works but lately a new spirit pervading the city, with citizen support that needed developments should go ahead.

"I think it's a very good thing there is this spirit of progress in the city but we've got to get our feet on the ground and establish priorities because we can't do all these things at once."

ELECTION MEETINGS

Four political meetings in the local election campaign are scheduled this evening: Victoria Liberal candidate David Groos appears at Boiler-makers' Hall, 802 Esquimalt Road, 8 p.m.

Social Crediters M. H. Mooney, Victoria candidate, and Education Minister Leslie Peterson, share the stage at Pacific Coast Beauty School, 1119 Fort, 7 to 9 p.m.

Robert Ostler, Esquimalt Saanich Liberal candidate, 8 p.m. at McMorran's, Cordova Bay.

Candidate George Chatterton speaks for Esquimalt-Saanich Conservatives at Sooke Community Hall at 8.

Funeral Saturday For John V. Johnson

John V. (Johnny) Johnson, brother of ex-premier Byron Johnson and formerly co-manager of Evans, Coleman and Johnson Brothers Ltd., died in the Cloverly private hospital this morning, aged 73.

A prominent public figure for many years, Mr. Johnson was a former president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, Victoria Automobile Club, Vancouver Island Associated Boards of Trade, Citizens-War Services Committee, Victoria YMCA and Victoria Baseball and Athletic Club.

He was the oldest living member of Victoria Rotary Club, a past grand councillor of the United Commercial Travellers Association and a member of Oak Bay council for 27 consecutive years.

Funeral services will be conducted in St. John's Anglican Church Saturday at 1:30 p.m. by Canon George Biddle and the ashes will be interred in the family mausoleum at Ross Bay Cemetery.

1930 MERGER

Born here in 1889, Mr. Johnson and his brother Byron formed Johnson Brothers Ltd. in 1919 and merged it with Evans, Coleman and Evans in 1930. After the merger, Mr. J. V. Johnson continued as co-manager with Donald E. Smith until his retirement on Dec. 31, 1955.

He was asked many times to stand as a Liberal candidate for parliament, but refused on the ground that "one in the family is enough."

He was a member of St. Andrew's Lodge No. 49, AM and AM, The Scottish Rite, Victoria Shrine Club and sat on the board of management for St. John's Anglican Church.

Mr. Johnson is survived by a son, John P. Johnson, at 3118 Henderson Road, Victoria; two sisters, Mrs. Lilian Russell of Vancouver and Mrs. Dagmar Evans of Seattle; his brother Byron at 2895 Beach Drive; and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Tuesday in Vernon for Georgina Esther Hurved, a one-time Saanich resident.

She died in hospital March 14 at the age of 87 years.

Born in Bedford, Eng., September 23, 1875, she had been a resident of British Columbia for 51 years. She is survived by many nieces and nephews in England.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MARCH 21, 1963—PAGE 17

Shots Signal Gun Store Raid

Choosy Thief Test Fires Weapons

A thief apparently testing a number of weapons before stealing them sent a squad of police rushing to Cook and Fort early this morning.

The squad, headed by Inspector John Howe, was summoned to the area by an anonymous phone call reporting shots being fired at about 1:45 a.m.

The officers found, upon arrival, the front door of McGregor's Rod and Gun, 1054 Fort, standing open. The Yale lock had been forced.

Missing were two .38 calibre revolvers, a .22 rifle, a four-inch belt knife and a box of .38 ammunition.

Total value of the stolen weapons and ammunition was estimated at about $140.

BREAK-INS

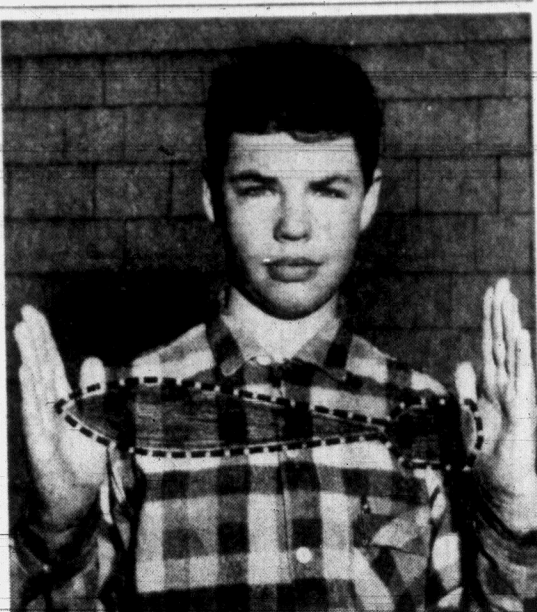

More break-ins were reported throughout the Victoria area overnight.

About $125 was taken from a strongbox at Buckle's Service Station, Pandora and Quadra. The fireproof box was not locked, and no damage to the premises was reported.

In Saanich, two instances of tool theft from houses under construction were reported.

A sander, saw, drill and wrench worth about $139 were taken from 5404 Parker.

The other power tool robbery occurred at 5314 Parker. Back in the city, two houses at 2643 Cedar Hill and 2700 Avebury, were broken into and ransacked, but it is not yet known if anything is missing.

It Was This Big—and Deadly

Game of Catch With Live Bomb

Two Saanich boys have been playing catch with a live bomb.

Ken Howard, 13, said "Here, catch this." Arthur Spellman, 11, caught it.

They tossed it back and forth "about 11 times."

"I almost missed it once—just caught it by the fin," Arthur added.

Ken said, "When Arthur's arms got tired he went away. Then I began throwing it on the ground."

RCN bomb and mine disposal section spokesmen said later:

"If hit just in the right spot—it could have exploded."

It's a miracle the boys are alive today, they added.

The boys are foster children of Mrs. E. O. Matthews, 1028 Inverness. Although the bomb was only turned over to authorities Wednesday, she said the boys played their game with death last week.

VACANT HOUSE

The boys told her about the bomb they found in the basement of a vacant house across the street at 1033 Inverness.

"I knew the man who had lived there was a war veteran. I thought it was a harmless souvenir. I told them to stay out of the basement."

Mrs. Matthews, a widow, has charge of five foster children.

She said they play often in the ravine opposite her home and around the house beside the ravine, where the bomb was found.

Ken Howard said Arthur was chasing him when he ran through the unlocked basement door, saw the bomb on a shelf and picked it up for the game of "Russian roulette" catch.

The bomb was found again Wednesday by telephone repairman Ernest Jack, 1611 Mortimer.

"I was disconnecting the phone in the basement when I saw it on the bench," He thought it was a dummy.

COULD KILL

He phoned Saanich police. Const. William Stephenson picked it up and turned it over to the navy who will destroy it.

Lt. Cmdr. W. E. James said the bomb, if exploded would have killed the boys and destroyed the house.

"During the past week, we have picked up 10 bombs in Greater Victoria, all different types."

Some have been kept by ex-servicemen as souvenirs. But four smoke bombs and four flares have been found on local beaches—the debris from war exercises in Juan de Fuca Strait.

The bomb found by the boys was described by PO George Ackerman as an 11½-pound Second World War air training practice bomb.

The navy issued this warning:

Any object resembling a bomb, shell, hand grenade or blasting cap when found, should be considered lethal.

Don't touch it. Call the police.

Some people keep grenades or bombs on their mantelpiece. Just because the striker pin or fuse has been removed doesn't make them safe in all cases.

Often they are still filled with explosives.

KILLER FOUND AT KEATING MOVIE SET

Ex-Victorian William Drake thinks he is even luckier than the two boys who played with the Saanich bomb—Mr. Drake tried to take it apart.

Now living in retirement in North Surrey, he says he found the bomb at Keating after a commando movie was made in that area, during war years.

It was in the basement of his former home at 1033 Inverness that the bomb was found.

"I've fooled around with it—tried to take it apart once. I must have been lucky," he told the Times in a telephone interview.

Late P. A. Gibbs Remembered 'Y' Before Death

Victoria's YM-YWCA building fund campaign received another boost this week when $500 was received from the estate of the late P. A. Gibbs.

Several days before his death in 1960, the former MLA asked that $500 be set aside from his estate for the "Y" building fund.

"It was typical of Archie Gibbs that, in his last days his thoughts were concerned about the future of his community," Hugh Stephen, chairman of the drive, said today.

Band Player Wm. Davidson Dies at 75

The flag at Victoria's University School was flown at half-mast today in honor of William Davidson, caretaker at the school for 30 years, who died Wednesday from a heart attack.

"He was greatly loved by all the boys at this school," said J. J. Timmins, headmaster.

Mr. Davidson, who was 75, lived on the school premises and was a prominent city musician. He played tuba and trumpet with Victoria Symphony Orchestra, the Canadian Scottish Band, the Shrine Band and once played in orchestras at the Royal Theatre and Pantages.

Funeral arrangements by McCall Brothers will be announced later.

Saanich parks and recreation committee stalled on a recommendation of police chief W. A. Pearson, that no boats over five horsepower be allowed on Prospect Lake.

The committee recommended that more powerful boats be allowed as long as they keep to the centre of the lake. It advocated a meeting between boating enthusiasts and the Prospect Lake and District Community Association, which already has asked for speed restrictions on the lake, to reach some agreement.

Colwood ratepayers passed a resolution Wednesday night to request a reduction of the present 40 mph speed limit to 30 mph from Colwood Corner to Jacklin Road on the Sooke Road.

The resolution was passed by 33 ratepayers at a meeting of the Colwood Fire Protection District, in which C. H. Ridley was re-elected for a three-year term as trustee.

Seal of Approval For Seal Campaign

Victoria's 1963 Easter Seal Appeal was officially opened today at City Hall by Mayor R. B. Wilson.

This means the B.C. Society for Crippled Children has started its annual mail campaign for funds to keep Bunny Buses, Easter Seal House and summer camps in operation for another year.

About 54,000 residents south of the Malahat will receive envelopes containing seals with a picture of a little girl clutching a dolly and supporting herself with a crutch with the other.

Lions Clubs in the Victoria area have been preparing and addressing envelopes for the past month.

SUMMER CAMP

Last year in Victoria, two Bunny Buses carried 15,450 passengers a total of 44,000 miles. Twenty-eight youngsters had a holiday at a summer camp at Shawinigan Lake which was co-sponsored by Oak Bay Kiwanis Club, Royal Canadian Navy has donated pool and swim instruction time at Naden.

Closely allied with the above services is Easter Seal House in Vancouver. Parents bring children there for diagnostic or treatment services. It is a home away from home for almost 250 families annually from all points in B.C.

Although the society charges nominal fees for those who can pay, the Easter Seal Appeal foots most of the bill. A government grant amounts to less than one per cent of the total budget.

The Victoria campaign, which ends April 21, has a goal of $12,500.

SYMBOL of local Easter Seal Appeal this year is seven-year-old Michael Hogan, 4159 Hawkes Ave. Michael is a frequent passenger on Bunny Buses, financed by the sale of seals, which transport him to Victoria offices of B.C. Polio Foundation for speech therapy and to Naden for swimming instruction held in co-operation with B.C. Society for Crippled Children.

DEAR ABBY...

Notice to Teen-Agers!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We are unable to convince our teen-age daughter that it is bad taste to show affection in public. I'm talking about the sickening behaviour one sees today between young people going steady. She thinks it's all right to hang on to a boy and put her arm around his waist while he does the same when they walk down the street. Also, because "everyone else does it," she sees nothing wrong with sitting practically on his lap while he drives the car. If we tell her it looks bad, she says we are living in the dark ages. She'll take your word for it, Abby, so please enlighten her, along with a few million others.

EXASPERATED: DEAR EXASPERATED: This is for all the vulnerable parties. Please, young lovers, wherever you are, believe me, it is in the poorest taste to act lovey-dovey in public. A boy who respects a girl will not initiate it, and a girl who respects herself will not encourage it. So hands off. And I mean 100% off.

DEAR ABBY: Last fall a distant relative of ours started sending us a religious paper. Our family is not of that religion and we do not enjoy reading it. I know this relative meant well, but we are not interested in being "converted" and this paper seems to have that as its purpose. Should we let this relative continue sending it. The paper must cost something and I'm sure the postage does. We just throw it away without even looking at it. Or should we write and tell him to quit sending it.

MINNIE: DEAR MINNIE: Write to your relative and tell him you appreciate his thoughtfulness—but you and your family are not interested in the paper so he shouldn't waste the time and money to send it.

DEAR ABBY: The item in your column about how to tell an "eight-year-old blabbermouth" that he was going to have a little brother or sister brought back memories. When our little boy was eight, I was expecting a baby, and it was quite apparent. So I told him a new arrival was on the way. He said, "Let ME tell Daddy about it when he comes home from work." He was so disappointed when I told him that Daddy already knew.

MIRIAM: Stop worrying. Write to Abby. For a personal reply enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. For Abby's booklet, "How To Have a Lovely Wedding," send 35 cents to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cushing, 4032 Palmetto Place, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Barbara June, to Mr. Darrell Duncan Lorimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Lorimer, 452 Constance Avenue. The wedding will take place on April 11 at 8 p.m., in Cadboro Bay United Church, with Rev. D. Wilson officiating.

Camping on Increase In Girl Guide Groups

A steady increase in outdoor camping was shown in report of Mrs. K. MacDougall, camp adviser, at annual meeting of Victoria Girl Guides held at Memorial Hall.

Mrs. MacDougall announced that 527 guides, brownies, rangers and guides had attended weekend and summer camps last year.

Area training adviser, Mrs. G. Kennedy reported that in 1962 emphasis was placed on uniform and marching and that goal for the present year is a qualified Brown and Blue trainer for each division.

A total of 900 badges were won during the year, including 19 religion and life emblems.

Meeting opened with a parade of the colors by land and sea rangers. Area commissioner Mrs. W. S. Emmerton welcomed those attending and introduced the deputy provincial commissioner, Mrs. J. S. Kendrick. Reports were read by division commissioners: Miss Dora Stoken, Craigflower; Mrs. B. Shaw, Gonzales; Mrs. H. Henderson, Lady Douglas; Mrs. W. Winnett, Camosun. They represented 1,817 guide members.

The year's work included assistance and help for many social services in the Greater Victoria area.

Reports were also given by Mrs. C. Hitchman, Trefoil Guild recorder and Mrs. F. J. Ashford, area music adviser. Meeting concluded with a showing of color slides by Miss Beverly Hunter, a land ranger who attended the world camp in Norway. Refreshments were served by representatives of district associations.

Clubwomen's News

Workshops—Centennial United Church Women held two workshops recently. Mrs. T. R. Shepherd presided at the afternoon meeting and Mrs. B. Barr in the evening. Devotionals were taken by Mrs. Shepherd and Mrs. R. J. Garner. Mrs. W. S. Vint introduced Mrs. G. W. Haglund, secretary of the presbyterial committee of stewardship and recruiting, who spoke at the evening meeting.

WHY GROW OLD?

Hard to Have Dreams Of Chocolate Creams While Doing Exercises

A reader who has been following my 8-Week Beauty Improvement Plan sent this trick to me to give to you. She says: "Dear Mrs. Lowman,

"I have been on your BIP course now for one week. I started with 1,200 calories a day and regular exercise, but I am more interested in losing inches than in losing pounds. I have not weighed yet but I have lost one inch from my waist and one-and-a-half inches from my hips. I am so thrilled in the results in just one week.

"I have a real good plan for myself. Between meals or right before the next meal when I feel hungry and would like to sink my teeth in something sweet (I crave sweets), I get up and do my exercises. It really works!

"When I have finished about a half-hour of exercise, my craving is gone and also I'm a half-hour closer to my next meal. It works for me. Maybe some of your other readers would like to know about this. It's a splendid idea! You

SHOPPING GUIDE

Dogwoods In Full Bloom On New Table Napkins

By PENNY SAVER

At long last it's come true. Napkins with dogwood motifs are on the market. Lunch and beverage size are 39 cents a package. Large dinner napkins and coasters have not arrived but are expected in about one to two weeks time.

Another item Penny has often been requested to find is no-drip candle coasters. If those same people phone me again I have the answer. There are six in a box for $1.50.

Something entirely new to Penny is a candle adapter. This is a small rubber plug or doughnut that fits into a regular holder making it the right size for holding tall, slender candles. This quick change can be made by buying a package of six adapters for 50 cents.

Do you dread having to iron your finest linen tablecloth every time you have company? Or do you panic when someone spills coffee on your best place mats? Eliminate your worries by using paper mats that look like linen with hand-embroidered Danish floral designs.

These mats are really something to see. You just won't believe they are paper until you take them out of the package. The design looks like someone has spent hours doing hand-embroidery all around the edge. Made of sturdy paper, they can be wiped off and used again, but are definitely not washable. Packages of eight sell for $1.50.

Now that you are beginning to think about having tea on the patio it is time to see about serving trays. Newest in this line is made of unbreakable stain-proof fiberglass.

Between two layers of fiberglass is a gay printed material which shows through and makes a most attractive lightweight tray.

Glass really is unbreakable. The manager threw a tray on the floor, and I didn't have to pick up the pieces. Price of a regular size rectangular tray is $3.95.

Wondering where Penny shopped? Phone 382-3131.

BE SMART—

The girl who turns her back on everyone this season is not being rude... she just has a back to show off! Don't cover yours this spring or summer—but don't expose it all at once, either! Tease a little. The one sketched is what we mean: it's slightly bloused to expose the prettiest part of the back but shapes up to a jeweled band at the neck. It moves gracefully. (The front, in case you're interested, is covered up.)

Barclay Choir Gives Program

Highlight of a recent program presented at meeting of the Junior Musical Art Society was appearance of the Vera Barclay's girls' choir. Miss Karen McIvor directed the junior section and Miss Veronica Milton, the seniors. Solos and duets were also given.

The following junior members also took part in the program: Lois George, Lois Pepper, Janet Reynolds, Judy Soper and Jacqueline Court, piano solos; Deborah Sanford accompanied by Connie Pepper and Diane Hayward accompanied by Mrs. J. Gough, violin solos; Mary Howland accompanied by Joan McCandlish, oboe solo; Mary Lou Foster, accompanied by her father, M. Foster, clarinet solo.

Mrs. Gough led a discussion on instruments of the percussion section of the symphony orchestra; Miss McCandlish thanked those on the program; Bruce Fryer was pianist for the national anthem.

"A bit of sunshine from Treasure Island" will be the slogan used by Miss Dolcine Guelpa, secretary and delegate of the Vancouver Island branch, when corsages of daffodils from Victoria are presented to women attending annual convention and exhibitions of the Canadian Restaurant Association in Toronto next Monday. More daffodils from this city, combined with tulips, narcissi and iris will be used in decorations at a hospitality luncheon and the convention banquet. Flowers are being flown east, Miss Guelpa, pictured above in a packing shed at Vantrigh's Gordon Head farm, leaves by jet for east on Saturday.

David Greenridge Married

A wedding of interest here took place recently in Seattle when Miss Constance Lu Holgate of that city exchanged vows with Frederick David Greenridge, formerly of Victoria. A reception was held at the home of the groom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Giles of Bellevue, Wash. Out-of-town guests included the groom's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Finn; his great-uncle, Mr. David Croston, and his paternal grandfather, Mr. J. A. Greenridge, all of Victoria. Following a honeymoon in the State of Washington and British Columbia, the couple will live in Seattle. Mr. Greenridge and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greenridge, lived at View Royal before moving to the United States. He attended View Royal School and Esquimalt High School.

Manitoba Guests

Here to attend the wedding of Joan Florence Bouchard and ABSG2 Gerald Gordon Macadam were the groom's mother, Mrs. G. F. Macadam, and his sister, Miss Marilyn Macadam of Winnipeg. His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin were here from Starbuck, Man.

Metchosin Women Mark A 50th Anniversary

Former officers and members of St. Mary's Metchosin Women's Auxiliary, joined recently with present officers and members to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the group. The ceremony started with communion. Those who attended were welcomed at the church by the president, Mrs. J. F. Taylor, Dr. A. W. R. Ashley gave the address of welcome on behalf of the church and a former rector, Canon H. M. Bolton, also spoke.

Mrs. B. P. Harding, recently retired as president of the diocesan board, brought greetings, and Mrs. Gavin Weir, branch historian, read a history of the branch from its start to the present day. Old photographs were on display with other items of interest. A light luncheon was served at noon. Six past presidents attended: Mrs. A. Cann, 1924-26; Mrs. Bolton, 1927-29 and 1941-1949; Mrs. Weir, 1950-51; Mrs. F. Dobie, 1954; Mrs. Bishop, 1953; and Mrs. H. E. Hubbard, 1957-61. Many of those present were descendants of early Metchosin settlers, some of whom donated the land for the church and cemetery. The auxiliary was formed on March 11, 1913, when five women held a meeting in the original Metchosin Hall, for the purpose of organizing a woman's branch in St. Mary's parish. The church will celebrate its 90th anniversary in July.

Snow Car, Her Ally

By PAT DUFOUR

A bombardier has been very much a part of Miss Gillian Clarke's life for the past five years. Bombardier in question is neither an airman nor soldier, but the oddly styled piece of equipment that enables driver and passengers to cross frozen lakes and delve through bush.

Says Miss Clarke, "It's something like a snowmobile with skis in front and cat wheels at back."

This 32-year-old woman arrived in Victoria, Tuesday, to become the first diocesan youth worker for the British Columbia diocese of the Anglican Church.

IN FROZEN NORTH

It was as a church worker in Manitoba that she became acquainted with bombardiers when, during winter months, she travelled north to conduct services, train youth leaders and help Sunday school teachers in mining towns, lonely trapper outposts and Indian reserves.

Miss Clarke was born and brought up in Newark, Nottinghamshire, Eng., and graduated in home economics at Leicester College in 1953.

Like many a young woman she wanted to travel so she said goodbye to her parents and went off to Canada for an 18-month visit.

A restricted budget made it necessary for her to work to help finance her stay so, when she reached Toronto, she took a job as cook at a church summer camp, 100 miles north of that city.

Remembering, "I learned then that I wanted to spend the rest of my life working for the church."

Summer over, Miss Clarke headed west and managed to find work in Brandon, Man., as assistant to a Bishop's Messenger, a name given to women who work full time for the church, often in remote areas where they are minister, teacher and youth worker rolled into one.

Miss Gillian Clarke is the first diocesan youth worker to be appointed to the British Columbia Diocese of the Anglican Church.

When her 18-month deadline was reached she headed back to England as promised. But her mind was made up.

In hardly any time at all, Miss Clarke persuaded her parents that her vocation was not in home economics. She enrolled in a missionary training college at Birmingham and in two years, graduated and was ready to step out into a new career.

Because of her past experience, she was returned to Brandon, this time as a fully-fledged youth worker. Her "parish" took in 760 miles and a variety of people, including Cree Indians in the north and Sioux Indians in the south.

Now, the only time her home economic training comes in useful is when she is put in charge of catering at church camps. "My training was challenged when I had to plan meals for 400 children in the church camp at Riding Mountain National Park."

NO RECIPES

And, although she found herself answering a variety of questions on her "rounds" which she made in transportation that ranged from bombardiers, planes, boats, train to the conventional car, not once was she even tempted to swap a recipe.

"There was so much else in life, it never crossed my mind."

Her new position here will see her responsible for youth work on Vancouver Island. Working under direction of Archbishop Harold E. Sexton, Miss Clarke will arrange seminars, co-operate with auxiliaries and generally encourage growth of all youth activities.

"The church is very much aware of the need for healthy and inspired leadership for young people in their formative years."

If good leadership begins with example, the local diocese is off to a good start with the arrival of this quietly determined young woman.

Married in St. Barnabas Church

Pink tulips and white stocks decorated St. Barnabas Anglican Church for the recent marriage of Miss Joan Florence Bouchard and ABSG2 Gerald Gordon Macadam, HMCS Saskatchewan.

Rev. Brian Page officiated at the evening ceremony. Organist was Miss A. Van der Voort.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a princess-style gown of white lace over taffeta. The bodice featured a scooped neckline, lily-point sleeves, and a full skirt extending into a chapel train. Fingertip tulle veil misted from a pearl coronet and pink rosebuds and white carnations were in her bouquet.

Bridesmaids, Mrs. W. Bouchard and bridesmaids, Miss Judie Hanson and Miss Lois Bennett wore bell-skirted gowns of French blue peau de soie, matching pillbox hats and white accessories. Pink carnations were in their bouquets.

Best man was Clyde Burgess and the ushers, Bill Bouchard and Bob Rae.

Pink rosebuds in a silver vase topped a three-tier wedding cake on the bride's table at a reception in Club Tango. White candles and pink roses completed the decor. Music was played by The Continentals. Clifford Bennett proposed the toast.

A three-piece powder blue knit suit was chosen by the bride for a going-away ensemble. Accessories were black and white gardenias were in her corsage. The newlyweds will make their home in Victoria.

Bad Drugs For Sale

WASHINGTON (AP)—A U.S. Food and Drug Administration medical officer charged Wednesday his agency permitted sale of unsafe drugs and left them on the market months after they showed signs of dangerous side effects.

FDA Commissioner George P. Larrick countered that the officer, Dr. John O. Nestor, was talking about incidents that occurred before new and tougher drug control laws went into effect.

"The three prime examples cited by Dr. Nestor involve drugs which have been off the market for a long time," Larrick said. He referred to the drugs Entouquel, MER-29 and Altafur.

Nestor, in testimony before a Senate government operations subcommittee investigating safety procedures for drug marketing, also charged that non-medical staff members at FDA had overruled expert medical opinion.

Larrick, in a statement issued later in the day, said:

"We operate under the terms of a law. Medical facts and judgments must be given effect in accordance with law. Administrators and attorneys are properly entitled to evaluate the medical facts before embarking on a regulatory program that must be sustained ultimately in the courts."

Nestor, 50-year-old specialist in children's diseases, has been with the FDA about two years, in charge of evaluating new drug applications in his field.

NO TARIFF, NO BOARD

Short Term Job For Former MP

Victoria Liberal candidate David Groos suggested Wednesday that the tariff board appointment of A. DeB. McPhillips will be a short one.

Confident of a Liberal victory April 8, Mr. Groos said the tariff board will disappear.

He told 80 Victoria College students at noon:

"I see that Mr. McPhillips has been appointed to the tariff board just at a time when the Liberals are going to do away with tariffs."

"This made me feel a little better," he added.

Mr. McPhillips, Victoria Conservative member of the last parliament, has received a 10-year appointment to the board at a salary of $13,500 annually.

Mr. Groos pointed out that emergency measures taken by the Diefenbaker government to restore the health of the Canadian economy—dollar devaluation, loans from the U.S. and higher tariffs "merely gave the patient a breathing spell."

"We have raised our tariffs without (U.S.) retaliation," he said. But he added, freer trade must be restored soon or Canada can expect retaliatory measures.

Mr. Groos reiterated the main points of a Liberal program—creation of an industrial development department to provide 1,000,000 new jobs within four years, a national portable, contributory pension plan, a national health plan and 10,000 $1,000 scholarships.

But he said only a majority Liberal government could effect these social changes.

Speaking to the question of nuclear arms for Canada, he said, "No party is running on a pro-nuclear arms platform. All parties feel their approach

Charged With Murder

BALTIMORE (AP)—An indictment charging murder was returned Tuesday against William Zantinger, accused in the death of a hotel barmaid.

is in the best interests of peace."

But Canada has given an undertaking to accept nuclear warheads for NATO and NORAD forces and the commitment must be respected if Canada is to be respected.

FOR DEFENCE

He said the nuclear arms proposed for acceptance are defensive weapons, good for deterring attack but useless for attacking any other nation.

Esquimalt-Saanich candidate Robert Ostler rejected Conservative charges that the Liberals had obstructed the last parliament.

He said the Tories, though elected in June, did not convene Parliament until Sept. 27, then took a month off at Christmas, despite pleas of Liberal Leader Lester Pearson.

It was the Tories who were not eager to come to grips with needed new legislation, he said.

"Of 34 proposals in the throne speech, only eight were enacted and many never were introduced."

"Very few of the standing committees reported; some had never met," he said.

"The question period was short and there was no heckling."

Outside the college main building, however, hecklers were having a field day as about 100 students ringed Don Porier, international organizer of the World Socialist Party. He harangued the students for their "subjection" to capitalism and attacked Liberals, Conservatives, Social Crediters and New Democratic Party theories with equal intensity.

In Our HOUSE

By Arthur Mayse

Overshadowed though they are by the sorry comedy at the Court-house, our legislators are not without innocent little diversions of their own. They indulged in one such on Wednesday—a cross-floor slanging match which as Lands and Forests Minister Ray Willis, ton remarked later, loosed a good few kilowatts into the air.

With Mr. Williston's salary vote still hanging fire, Premier Bennett tried to hurry through his say on Peace River versus Columbia power.

At once NDP John Squire of Alberni cracked out a protest, telling the premier he had no right to butt in on a point of order to which he wasn't entitled.

"I'm the House Leader," Mr. Bennett retorted; and the brawl was under way.

Opposition Leader Strachan (he and Mr. Bennett both on their feet and finger-wagging): "The premier is not raising a point of order. It is he who is out of order. The real reason for these hysterical outbursts of his is the knowledge that the people of this province are against him."

Mr. Bennett: "It is you of the Opposition who are out of order—not only in this House, but in the eyes of the people."

And more of the same, until Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane—who had already hurled a rock or two from the sidelines—ended the fuss with a courtly gesture.

"I note in the gallery," said Mr. Macfarlane, "the presence of a group of delightful young ladies from St. Margaret's School. I am sure you have presented them with an excellent example of parliamentary decorum."

Gallantly done; but he needn't have worried. The grade 10 girls whose red blazers and berets added color to the ladies' gallery, enjoyed every minute of the crackling exchange.

Logically, this being our first private member's day after eight weeks of debate, we should have followed with a reading of Mrs. Lois Haggan's bill to amend the Fireworks Act. Instead, with the late-session air revitalized, the House plowed on to vote Mr. Williston's boosted salary and approve his estimates.

Meanwhile, outside the Legislative Chamber, one of our war veteran attendants was coping with a situation that called for tact and ingenuity.

Up to the public gallery doors stepped a father of three, his mouselized brood tagging after.

"Sorry, sir," the attendant told him. "You can't take the children in."

Then, with grandfatherly kindness, he ranged the youngsters in folding chairs in the corridor, passed dad through, and appointed himself baby-sitter.

Minutes later, the inevitable happened.

"We have to go to the bathroom," the little girls announced in chorus.

"So I instructed the boy to stay in his chair," the attendant recounted, "and took the little girls off to the ladies', one by each hand. They went in, and I waited for them to come out."

"They didn't, and I began to worry a bit, what with being off station and of course unable to go in after them. Finally I went to get help from a government stenographer. In the few seconds I was gone, the girls popped out. I hunted them up and down, in a proper sweat, and found they'd strayed into one of the caucus rooms.

"No harm done... but perhaps you'd remind the public they mustn't bring small children to the galleries."

$3 MILLION PER YEAR

Town Proposed To Support UBC

VANCOUVER (CP)—The provincial government is studying a $300,000,000 plan for developing an integrated community of about 40,000 on the University of British Columbia endowment lands.

The proposal, disclosed Wednesday by Webb & Knapp (Canada) Ltd., would provide the university with a projected income of $3,000,000 a year when the community is fully developed in 15 years.

The proposal involves 10 self-contained neighborhoods, an 84-acre office and research estate and town centre complete with civic, cultural and commercial facilities.

The development would not involve land currently in use or projected for development by the university nor would it interfere with those who now lease property on the endowment land.

E. R. Loftus, vice-president of Webb & Knapp, said that under the company's proposal the provincial government would maintain control of the land, and all buildings would be used on a lease basis.

The industrial estate, planned to give private research facilities a chance to be developed along with research undertaken by UBC, he said. The projected road system would provide rapid access to the university without the necessity of heavy traffic in dwelling areas.

The B.C. government has been studying the proposal for 15 months, Mr. Loftus said.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Eric Martin introduced a law in the legislature Wednesday paving the way for an $18,000,000 health centre at UBC.

Construction is expected to start in about two years, Mr. Martin said.

The centre will include a 410-bed hospital. There will be 60 beds for psychiatric care. Altogether there will be about 16 various units of the centre, providing all types of care and research, including dentistry.

Mr. Martin said financing will be under the provisions of the Hospital Act. The federal government will provide 15 per cent of construction costs and the provincial government will split the remainder with UBC.

CHARGES LIBERAL PLOT

DONNACONA, Que. (CP)—Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, said today he believes reports from party sources that Liberal supporters are planning to stage a traffic accident that would put him out of action for the rest of the April 8 federal election campaign.

He first mentioned the reports near the end of a campaign speech Wednesday night in this newspaper—manufacturing town 30 miles southwest of Quebec City.

About 1,600 persons filled a church basement to overflowing for the meeting.

Mr. Caouette told a reporter today he is not making any changes in his travel plans and

EDMONTON—Hecklers gave Prime Minister Diefbaker his roughest reception of the election campaign here Wednesday night, repeatedly interrupting his speech with cries like "What about Harkness?" and "You're a liar."

But while he was being peppered with taunts—some even threw bits of apple towards the stage but they fell short—the prime minister was not rattled and nearly always "gave as good as he got."

He had reason to feel confident. Conservative workers had organized for him one of the biggest crowds to attend any of his rallies so far in the campaign. Estimates of the overflow crowd at Jubilee Auditorium ranged from a conservative 5,000 to 8,000.

Buoyed by the turnout—and the audience was overwhelmingly for him—Mr. Diefbaker held his own with the hecklers by firing back such replies as, "this appears to be the same Liberals I faced in the House of Commons..." Liberalism denied the prime minister the right to speak in the House of Commons...

He was aware that action was needed to create a quarter of a million new jobs for Canadians in each of the next four years. It meant ending industrial stagnation. It meant seeing that present industries started growing again and that new industries were started to develop Canada's resources.

Working on problem Mr. Pearson said the Liberal party had been working on this program for some time. He outlined the program under six headings:

(1) A new Liberal government will establish a special department of industry. It will be responsible for working out, industry by industry, and area by area, ways of producing more in Canada. It will do this in co-operation with the provinces and municipalities concerned and with the help of labor and management.

It will be the responsibility of the new department to encourage the establishment of new plants and the expansion of existing ones. It will be its responsibility to see that this is done in the places where it is most required. The Atlantic region was one of those places.

Tax incentives As inducements, companies will be offered special tax incentives. When these incentives are not enough the new department will be able to arrange for grants and loans to get things going, said Mr. Pearson.

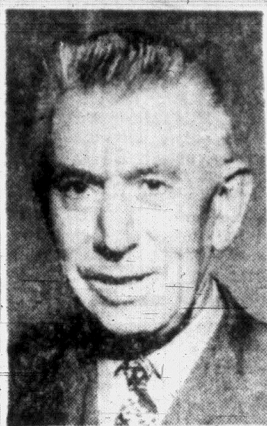

(2) A new Liberal government will make doubly sure, he said, that the special needs of those parts of the country where unemployment is particularly high are given proper attention. The government would set up a special federal agency for area development to do this.

This agency will be responsible for seeing that special consideration is given in all plans for economic expansion to those parts of the country that are in trouble or that have not shared properly in Canada's prosperity when there is general prosperity.

(3) New industries cannot be started overnight. On Wednesday night Mr. Diefbaker had barely started his speech before he recalled that last year he had "far fewer people than are here to night."

Every seat in the 2,700-seat auditorium was filled. The aisles were filled with standees, and in the spacious lobby there were at least 2,500 more persons who heard the 70-minute speech over a public address system.

Perjury Claim Made at Probe

By FRANK RUTTER and AB KENT

A highways department engineer made money on the side by renting equipment to contractors on government jobs, the graft probe was told today.

The employee, Vincent L. Gresty, mechanical superintendent at Kamloops between 1957 and 1960, identified as a friend of Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi.

The evidence came to light today before the legislature's public accounts committee investigating allegations of graft in the highways department.

It was brought out by committee counsel Lloyd G. McKenzie in questioning Harvey A. Campbell of Creston, who said he, too, was a friend of Mr. Gagliardi's.

Mr. McKenzie based his questions upon the secret RCMP report on Project 819, a section of Trans-Canada Highway near Revelstoke, which he started to use Wednesday night.

Witness' Testimony Interrupted

On Wednesday Mr. McKenzie for equipment on Project 819—$1,700 and $1,394.

Mr. Campbell started the day denying any knowledge of Mr. Gresty being paid for renting equipment used on Project 819. He said he rented a grader from Mr. Gresty's brother, James.

Mr. McKenzie then produced the photostat of a letter from Mr. Campbell to Union Contractors, who were in charge of 819.

Dated Aug. 6, 1958, it said: "Refer to our letter July 29 and Le Tourneau scraper, Model K.P."

"Dear sir: Please be advised that these instructions given in error. All rentals on the machine belong to Vince Gresty."

"Please apply the credits for this machine to him."

'Can't Recall Circumstances'

Mr. Campbell admitted the letter bore his signature, but said he didn't remember writing it.

The letter, Mr. McKenzie said, came from Mr. Strachan. "I can't recall just what the circumstances were."

Mr. Campbell said he had been under the impression the machine was owned by Mr. Lymburner.

Earlier Mr. Campbell had testified that he bought his equipment firm, Mid-City Construction, from Vincent and James E. Gresty in 1957.

He held all but one share. Mr. McKenzie asked if he paid anything for the shares.

"I don't recall that I paid anything for them," Mr. McKenzie asked if it was true that Mr. Gresty was the financial backer for Mid-City.

Lymburner 'Very Close to Me'

He said that Burton Lymburner was also "very close to me." He is the man that Montana contractor Dick Holzworth earlier testified was a contact man between the contractors and Highways Minister Gagliardi.

Mr. McKenzie said that in the mid-1950s Mr. Gresty and Mr. Lymburner were associates in several companies.

He asked what relationship Mr. Gresty had with the highways minister. They were friends, replied Mr. Campbell. "With Mrs. Gagliardi, too?" "I imagine so."

"On a social basis?" "Yes." Mr. Campbell repeated Wednesday's testimony that the deal was for Mr. Gresty to quit his government job and come into the company once it was doing well. He never

Financial Backing Claimed

Mr. McKenzie then read part of a statement which Mr. Campbell "didn't remember" giving to the RCMP in 1959. It said flatly that Mr. Gresty was the financial backer of Mid-City.

"Did you have any direct dealings with Mr. Gagliardi?" asked Mr. McKenzie.

"No." Mr. Campbell did admit, however, he knew Mr. Gagliardi—"I guess you would say I was a friend of his."

Mr. McKenzie then asked if Mr. Campbell knew about Mr. Gresty receiving cheques from Union Contractors. One secretary

'Edmonton Could Be a Seaport'

EDMONTON (CP) — Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit Party, says that for $3,000,000 Canada could have a Prairie seaway from the foothills of the Rockies to Hudson Bay.

The waterway, he said Wednesday night would make Edmonton a "seagoing port" and give the Prairies a low-cost water transport system that would equal the Mississippi in the United States or the Rhine in Europe.

'We Ask Them To Keep Their Own Promises'

REGINA (CP) — The Liberal party's pro-nuclear policy would not itself be a stumbling block to NDP support for a Liberal minority government, federal leader T. C. Douglas of the New Democratic Party said Wednesday night.

"We don't ask them to keep our promises, but we do ask them to keep their own promises," Mr. Douglas told an overflow crowd of 2,000 in a dance hall.

The NDP opposes nuclear arms for Canada.

Mr. Douglas repeated a statement made earlier at a press conference that his party would be prepared to support a Liberal or Conservative minority government provided it takes early action to get the economy rolling and relieve unemployment.

But he had added at the press conference that the NDP would reserve the right to vote in Parliament against acquisition of nuclear arms.

Mr. Douglas restated his party's three-point program designed to bring new life to the farm economy.

The plan would preserve family farms by providing credit facilities to allow operators to effect needed improvements, recognize the principle of income parity as between farmers and business and labor, and recognize that agricultural abundance is "not a tragedy but a marvelous opportunity to develop the Canadian economy and contribute to improved living conditions in the world generally."

Mr. Douglas flew here from Ontario Wednesday afternoon and planned to continue on to the West Coast today.

He praised the people of Saskatchewan, led by a "gallant" Premier Lloyd and his cabinet, for establishing the first comprehensive medical care insurance plan in North America.

The Saskatchewan act had generated such a demand for medical care insurance that "no government can hope to survive unless it does something about it."

TWO YOUTHS GUNNED DOWN IN 'TEEN FEUD'

SEATTLE (AP) — A longtime feud between five teen-age boys erupted in gunfire on Wednesday evening, leaving two dead, a third wounded and the fourth in custody.

Killed were David Cunningham, 17, a high school track star, and 19-year-old Andrew J. Drain, Jr., Ulysses Heath, 17, suffered a flesh wound in the arm.

Police Lieut. Dean Phillips gave this account of the shooting:

Cunningham, Drain, Heath and Louis Weaver, 18, were riding in Heath's car as it raced another vehicle in the Madrona district. The second car was driven by Dewitt A. Harris, 19, police said.

The cars stopped opposite one another and the youths in Heath's car walked over to Harris. An argument broke out and Phillips said Heath swung on Harris.

Phillips said Harris signed a statement in which he said he pulled out a .38 calibre revolver and started firing.

The Prairie Seaway could also lower the costs of shipping raw materials to Canadian secondary industry.

Mr. Thompson advanced the idea of the western waterway in challenging Canadians to recapture a spirit of pioneering—"to dare the impossible and achieve a few miracles."

"The time has come for a new vision, a new purpose and a new approach," he told 115

Thompson Offers To Lead 'Right'

STONY PLAIN, Alta. (CP) — Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit party, Wednesday expressed a willingness to lead a new private enterprise party to provide stable government—if Social Credit gains the strongest position in a new Parliament of minorities.

Mr. Thompson told reporters after a political meeting in this farming community 20 miles west of Edmonton that the new party—if it ever became a reality—would include elements of both old-line parties.

He made the statement after explaining to about 110 persons at the Stony Plain Community Hall that he would not accept a coalition with the Liberal or Progressive parties if either one emerged from the April 8 election as the largest minority party in Parliament.

"I don't want a coalition," he said in answer to a question.

But Social Credit would co-operate with the largest minority party to push through necessary legislation to meet Canada's problems.

If, on the other hand, Social Credit succeeded in winning the most seats, yet not enough to form a majority government, then he said he would offer cabinet posts to

His speech—winding up a day that saw him fly from Toronto to Edmonton and dash by car to nearby Stony Plains for a farm rally—was largely a statement of Social Credit principles for monetary reform.

He fired a blast at Eric Kierans, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges, for his "slandering and misinformed attack" on Social Credit.

"good men" in both the Liberal and Conservative parties.

He said he could see the day coming when political forces would align themselves behind two basic policies—the New Democrats and their state planning on one side, backed by left-wing elements in the Liberal party, while Social Credit supported by private enterprise MPs from both the Liberals and Conservatives, would hold the position on the political right.

After the meeting Mr. Thompson told a reporter that his idea for offering cabinet posts to Liberals and Conservatives to form a majority cabinet did not mean a coalition.

But, he added, it could eventually mean a new party, based on private enterprise principles and business-like government.

Mainland Tax Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor William Rathie Wednesday forecast an increase of about 15 per cent in city taxes this year, amounting to about $38 more for the average homeowner. The average property tax bill last year was $258.

Non-Nuclear Warhead Out

OTTAWA (CP) — North American Air Defence Command headquarters says in a 350-word statement available here Wednesday that it would take at least three years and more than $30,000,000 to develop a conventional high explosive warhead for Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles in Canada.

The statement issued by NORAD headquarters at Colorado Springs, and distributed to persons who had questioned NORAD on the point, added that even then the conventional warhead would be "vastly inferior" to existing defensive nuclear warheads now available for Bomarc.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, in a campaign speech at Halifax Friday, cited a 1961 NORAD press release which said "Bomarc can be equipped with either high explosive or nuclear warheads."

The NORAD statement said some development effort on a conventional warhead for the Bomarc-A was conducted by the U.S. Air Force but that results were unsatisfactory and the development was stopped before completion.

FABULOUSLY PHOTOGRAPHED MOVIE

Lawrence Leaves One Wondering

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
VANCOUVER — The men who made "The Bridge on the River Kwai" have done the same kind of job on the fabulous Lawrence of Arabia as they did on the eccentric British colonel who built a bridge and then destroyed it—they leave you wondering if you like Lawrence or not!

This turbulent British movie, directed by David Lean and produced by Sam Spiegel, presents Lawrence as a frustrated idealist who was also an incurable egotist—a man who exalted in his originality and couldn't bear to be thought of as other men.

The word "great" is much abused these days, but it can be fitly applied to the three-and-a-half hour epic which was given its Western Canada premiere before a fashionable audience in Vancouver's new Odeon Theatre on Granville Street Wednesday night.

The 700 guests paid $5 a seat for the privilege and their money is being donated by Odeon to the Vancouver International Festival. The new theatre, a reconstruction of the old Plaza (and before that the Maple Leaf), was officially opened by C. B. Salmon, president of Odeon Theatres (Canada) Ltd.

One interesting aspect of the film is that Patrick O'Toole, a comparatively unknown Irish actor, was picked to play Lawrence while the supporting roles were given to such famous personalities as Alec Guinness, Jose Ferrer, Anthony Quinn, Claude Rains, Jack Hawkins and Anthony Quayle.

"UN-ENGLISH" — Alec Guinness (who once played Lawrence on the stage) is remarkably effective and amazingly "un-English" in the role of Prince Faisal. But Jack Hawkins' interpretation of General Allenby (Lawrence's commander-in-chief) does not conform with what we have read of him.

It is the portrait of a cynic rather than a statesmanlike soldier, who at least understood what Lawrence was trying to accomplish.

Claude Rains, an old master of the quiet philosophical role is at his best as Dryden, Allenby's devious political advisor, and Anthony Quayle is every inch the old-type British colonel who clings to the admirably inadequate code of military obedience.

Omar Sharif, a favorite with eastern movie-goers, is introduced to western audiences as Sheikh Ali ben el Kharish.

The photography, directed by Frederick Young, is so effective that, the day after the premiere, a man said:

"I still feel as if I had sand in my hair."

SCOPE AND COLOR

It is phenomenal in scope and color—a remarkable documentary of the Arabian desert in all its moods.

Then there is the charging, ferocious music of Maurice Jarre, interpreted by the London Philharmonic Orchestra under Sir Adrian Boult.

The central theme is a haunting melody which could well be a popular song if suitable words were found for it.

Four years of planning and 19 months of shooting went into the production of "Lawrence of Arabia," and the cast runs into thousands.

Minimum Wage Hike Requested

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor Tuesday asked the Board of Industrial Relations to set a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for office workers.

It told the board this rate is "absolutely essential to bring all workers at least within reach of a basic standard of living."

The board reserved decision. The present minimum wage is 75 cents an hour. Based on a 35-hour week this produces $115.50 a month, for a 40-hour week $132 a month.

The federation said these are inadequate and fall far short of the basic minimum needs of an individual, let alone a family.

While no thinking person can ignore the potential of the djinn that escaped its bottle over Hiroshima it occurs to me we may be using this bogey as a distraction from worries closer to home.

For Canadians, the most serious of these is or should be the possibility that 1967, instead of being our Confederation's centennial year, may find us trying to pick up the pieces of a broken Dominion.

Laugh this suggestion off as scare talk if you will. But I'm not laughing, nor are the reported five per cent of Quebecois who fervently wish to see their province divorced from English-speaking Canada.

"There they are, where they have no right to be," Montcalm is quoted as exclaiming when he saw red coats on the Plains of Abraham. That, today, remains the Separatist attitude.

These deluded people mean business. Unless someone, somehow, can lay Wolfe's 200-year-old ghost, their movement will continue to expand.

Easements for the nationalism within a nation that is coming to a head in Quebec aren't hard to suggest.

One is a vastly augmented student and teacher exchange system, and this I heartily favor. But a panacea isn't a cure; and the good such mixing and mingling can achieve is limited. Also, its effects wouldn't be felt in depth for decades if not generations.

It has been argued to me, and brilliantly, that the fundamental cause of Quebec's isolationism is the "soft" peace offered by a conquering Britain through the Treaty of Paris.

The French should have been scattered as were Nova Scotia's Acadians. I've been told, and English enforced as Canada's single language. Logical though such arguments may appear, they leave me unconvinced. As a Canadian, non-French extraction, I've always been proud of the peace that laid the groundwork for Canada, as we know it. Without the Treaty of Paris, in fact, the Canada you and I inherited might never have been forged.

My friend Paul DuSault, the stone mason, is part of that Canada. So is his wife Therese and their daughter Clodette. These and others like them are dear to me. I can't think of their province as if it were a hostile foreign power. I don't want them to be hurt, or to hurt themselves.

I'm not leading up to any grandiose proposal for a settlement of this our most vexing national problem. Quite simply, I don't know how we're going to bring about true union in Canada.

Maybe we never can, since the problem is racial—emotional rather than economic. Whatever fair words may pass at the conference tables, I know the Quebec City cliche drivers are still going to insist the French were outnumbered 10 to one on that historic plain. Also that back street Montreal kids will keep right on mis-calling each other "peasoupers" or "les Anglais" according to the racial heritage of each.

We don't have to agree in all things, however. Just in the determination to keep Canada one and indivisible.

In a vague and general way I feel that the Quebec-Separatist malaise, while not domestic since it affects the Dominion, must be dealt with by responsible elements within the province. These, the Liberal bourgeoisie whose attitudes have gone stubbornly unchanged from Laurier's day, I see as Quebec's and our chief hope for a continued federation.

Without Quebec, would Canada remain a nation? I don't think so. Cut the Maritimes off and they must sooner or later follow an older-than-Confederation affinity, adding themselves to New England. It's only half in jest, down there, that they describe Boston as "Canada's second city."

Ontario-New York, British Columbia-Alaska. For the provinces between, union with their wheat-and-cattle neighbors.

And what of separated Quebec? Unable to stand alone, unacceptable as a colony of sufficiently-troubled France, she must also look south. Union with the United States would do what Confederation has never done—strip her of the right to her own language, and subject her to military draft for active overseas service. Even the most fanatic Separatist should find the price of a breakaway from English-speaking Canada high indeed!

Quebec has all to lose—including the baby bonus—and nothing to gain by secession. But she could still break Confederation; and I find even the remote possibility more worrisome than any other present threat.

Ledge-Perching Suspect Faces Trial Monday

City police constable J. L. Smith, on patrol on View Street shortly before 2 a.m. today, looked up and saw a figure perched on a second-storey window ledge of the T. Eaton Co. building.

The man was summoned to the sidewalk where he was arrested.

The building had not been entered.

In city police court today Robert W. Woodford was charged with vagrancy, for failing to "justify his presence" on the side of the building.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was remanded to Monday for trial. He was released on $300 bail.

Fourth City Fire Hall Turned Down

City fire wardens committee today tentatively agreed $25,000 should be put into a fund to relocate Burnside fire hall but a proposal to add a fourth fire hall at Hillside and Quadra did not clear its first budget hurdle.

A preliminary summary of the proposed 1963 civic budget—excluding school and a few other items—showed that aldermen will be faced with paring an increase of $1,213,561 over last year's budget.

However finance committee, opening the budget-cutting grind, was told that the increase covered all projects suggested by civic officials for aldermen to select the ones that should be done this year. They were not expected to be done all at one time.

SITE AVAILABLE

Fire warden's chairman Ald. A. I. Curtis said the city should relocate the Burnside firehall to an available site at John and Turner to give better protection to Victoria West and the industrial area at a gross cost of $65,000.

He also said a new firehall was needed to cover the northeast part of the city at Hillside and Quadra which would cost $150,000 for building, apparatus and 14 additional firemen needed to man the installation.

Mayor Wilson suggested $25,000 be put into a fund this year for relocating the Burnside firehall only.

Ald. Curtis said this would provide the relocation in two years or conceivably in one year if sale of the Burnside hall property and winter works grants were sufficient to make up the balance.

NEW SPIRIT

Earlier, Ald. Curtis made a general statement regarding the attitude council should take in tackling the budget this year.

He said that for many years, through depression and war periods, the city had to cut back on all needed works but lately a new spirit pervading the city, with citizen support that needed developments should go ahead.

"I think it's a very good thing there is this spirit of progress in the city but we've got to get our feet on the ground and establish priorities because we can't do all these things at once."

He was the oldest living member of Victoria Rotary Club, a past grand councillor of the United Commercial Travellers Association and a member of Oak Bay council for 27 consecutive years.

Funeral services will be conducted in St. John's Anglican Church Saturday at 1:30 p.m. by Canon George Biddle and

Shots Signal Gun Store Raid

Choosy Thief Tests Fires Weapons

A thief apparently testing a number of weapons before stealing them sent a squad of police rushing to Cook and Fort early this morning.

The squad, headed by Inspector John Howe, was summoned to the area by an anonymous phone call reporting shots being fired at about 1:45 a.m.

The officers found, upon arrival, the front door of McGregor's Rod and Gun, 1054 Fort, standing open. The Yale lock had been forced.

Missing were two .38 calibre revolvers, a .22 rifle, a four-inch belt knife and a box of .38 ammunition.

Total value of the stolen weapons and ammunition was estimated at about $140.

BREAK-INS

More break-ins were reported throughout the Victoria area overnight.

About $125 was taken from a strongbox at Buckle's Service Station, Pandora and Quadra. The fireproof box was not locked, and no damage to the premises was reported.

In Saanich, two instances of tool theft from houses under construction were reported.

A sander, saw, drill and wrench worth about $139 were taken from 5404 Parker.

The other power tool robbery occurred at 5314 Parker.

Back in the city, two houses, at 2643 Cedar Hill and 2700 Avebury, were broken into and ransacked, but it is not yet known if anything is missing.

It Was This Big—and Deadly

Game of Catch With Live Bomb

Two Saanich boys have been playing catch with a live bomb.

Ken Howard, 13, said "Here, catch this."

Arthur Spellman, 11, caught it.

They tossed it back and forth "about 11 times."

"I almost missed it once—just caught it by the fin," Arthur added.

Ken said, "When Arthur's arms got tired he went away."

"Then I began throwing it on the ground."

RCN bomb and mine disposal section spokesmen said later:

"It hit just in the right spot—it could have exploded."

It's a miracle the boys are alive today, they added.

The boys are foster children of Mrs. E. O. Matthews, 1028 Inverness. Although the bomb was only turned over to authorities Wednesday, she said the boys played their game with death last week.

Seven more mortar bombs in the old army training ground where two boy scouts were killed and another injured last Saturday.

One of the boys had struck an unexploded bomb with an axe.

The land, once used by the army, is now privately owned.

The RCMP reported that citizens throughout B.C. are turning in a collection of shells, bombs and other explosives which had been kept as war souvenirs, including a three-inch shell in Vernon and another aerial practice bomb, at Matsqui.

KILLER FOUND AT KEATING MOVIE SET

Ex-Victorian William Drake thinks he is even luckier than the two boys who played with the Saanich bomb—Mr. Drake tried to take it apart.

Now living in retirement in North Surrey, he says he found the bomb at Keating after a commando movie was made in that area, during war years.

It was in the basement of his former home at 1033 Inverness that the bomb was found.

"I've fooled around with it—tried to take it apart once. I must have been lucky," he told the Times in a telephone interview.

Late P. A. Gibbs Remembered 'Y' Before Death

Victoria's YM-YWCA building fund campaign received another boost this week when $500 was received from the estate of the late P. A. Gibbs.

Several days before his death in 1960, the former MLA asked that $500 be set aside from his estate for the "Y" building fund.

"It was typical of Archie Gibbs that, in his last days his thoughts were concerned about the future of his community," Hugh Stephen, chairman of the drive, said today.

Ask The Times

Q—What is the salary of the President of the United States? R.H.S.

A—His salary is $100,000 per year, taxable, with an expense allowance of $50,000 also taxable. In addition, $40,000 non-taxable may be added to his travelling and official entertainment expenses.

Congress in 1958 provided lifetime pensions of $25,000 a year, free mailing privileges, free office space and up to $50,000 yearly for office help for ex-presidents and $10,000 annually for their widows.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to "The Times," addressed to "Ask The Times," Editor, Questions and Answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve controversies or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Lt. Cmdr. W. E. James said the bomb, if exploded would have killed the boys and destroyed the house.

"During the past week, we have picked up 10 bombs in Greater Victoria, all different types."

Some have been kept by ex-servicemen as souvenirs. But four smoke bombs and four flares have been found on local beaches—the debris from war exercises in Juan de Fuca Strait.

The bomb found by the boys was described by PO George Ackerman as an 11½-pound Second World War air training practice bomb.

The navy issued this warning: Any object resembling a bomb, shell, hand grenade or blasting cap when found, should be considered lethal.

Don't touch it. Call the police. Some people keep grenades or bombs on their mantelpiece. Just because the strike pin or fuse has been removed doesn't make them safe in all cases.

Often they are still filled with explosives.

It was the first time he had mentioned the Liberal party by name although he has said on other occasions that Canada needs a stable government.

PRINCE RUPERT (CP)—One of three men missing for two weeks was found dead on nearby Prescott Island today. The body of Carl Lindquist of Prince Rupert, clad only in gum boots, was found above the high water mark on the beach of the island. He is believed to have died of exposure three days ago.

Harkness Denies Bomarc Obsolete

TORONTO (CP)—Former defence minister Douglas Harkness today denied a statement by Prime Minister Diefenbaker that the Bomarc missile is obsolete. Mr. Harkness told a press conference the Bomarc is a "thoroughly up-to-date surface-to-air anti-aircraft missile."

Dief Taunted
By HecklersBy ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

EDMONTON—Hecklers gave Prime Minister Diefenbaker his roughest reception of the election campaign here Wednesday night, repeatedly interrupting his speech with cries like "What about Harkness?" and "You're a liar."

But while he was being peppered with taunts—someone even threw bits of apple towards the stage but they fell short—the prime minister was not rattled and nearly always "gave as good as he got."

He had reason to: local Conservative workers had organized for him one of the biggest crowds to attend any of his rallies so far in the campaign. Estimates of the overflow crowd at Jubilee Auditorium ranged from a conservative 3,000 to 8,000.

Booed by the turnout—and the audience was overwhelmingly for him—Mr. Diefenbaker held his own with the hecklers by firing back such replies as, "This appears to be the same Liberals I faced in the House of Commons."

Liberalism denied the prime minister the right to speak in the House of Commons... these people belong to that school."

NEW PROMISES

Between the heckling the prime minister unveiled some new promises, measures to assist the provinces in more highway construction and to aid municipalities and provincial governments in urban development.

He said it was now necessary, in light of progress made on trans-Canada highway construction and in the roads to resources program, to "have consultations with the provinces on national highway policy."

"The needs will vary between provinces," he said. "Some will require better access to the trans-Canada. Some may want to emphasize roads to resources. Others will want to concentrate on trans-provincial highway systems."

Economic Aid
Plans Revealed
By PearsonBy VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

MONCTON, N.B.—A national development corporation will be created by a new Liberal government to provide capital to get new industries started in Canada, Liberal leader L. B. Pearson told an audience of 1,200 here Wednesday night.

He spelled out in detail the Liberal program for industrial expansion in Canada. Industrial growth was needed to restore prosperity and to put an end to unemployment.

He was aware that action was needed to create a quarter of a million new jobs for Canadians in each of the next four years. It meant ending industrial stagnation. It meant seeing that present industries started growing again and that new industries were started to develop Canada's resources.

WORKING ON PROBLEM

Mr. Pearson said the Liberal party had been working on this program for some time. He outlined the program under six headings:

(1) A new Liberal government will establish a special department of industry. It will be responsible for working out, industry by industry, and area by area, ways of producing more in Canada. It will do this in co-operation with the provinces and municipalities concerned and with the help of labor and management.

It will be the responsibility of the new department to encourage the establishment of new plants and the expansion of existing ones. It will be its responsibility to see that this is done in the places where it is most required. The Atlantic region was one of those places.

TAX INCENTIVES

As inducements, companies will be offered special tax incentives. When these incentives are not enough the new department will be able to arrange for grants and loans to get things going, said Mr. Pearson.

(2) A new Liberal government will make doubly sure, he said, that the special needs of those parts of the country where unemployment is particularly high are given proper attention. The government would set up a special federal agency for area development to do this.

This agency will be responsible for seeing that special consideration is given in all plans for economic expansion to those parts of the country that are in trouble or that have not shared properly in Canada's prosperity when there is general prosperity.

(3) New industries cannot be started.

On Wednesday night Mr. Diefenbaker had barely started his speech before he recalled that last year he had "far fewer people than are here to night."

Every seat in the 2,700-seat auditorium was filled. The aisles were filled with standees, and in the spacious lobby there were at least 2,500 more persons who heard the 70-minute speech over a public address system.

'Town' Proposed
To Support UBC

VANCOUVER (CP)—The provincial government is studying a $300,000,000 plan for developing an integrated community of about 40,000 on the University of British Columbia endowment lands.

The proposal, disclosed Wednesday by Webb & Knapp (Canada) Ltd., would provide the university with a projected income of $3,000,000 a year when the community is fully developed in 15 years.

The proposal involves 10 self-contained neighborhoods, an 84-acre office and research estate and town centre complete with civic, cultural and commercial facilities.

The development would not involve land currently in use or projected for development by the university nor would it interfere with those who now lease property on the endowment land.

RETAIN CONTROL

E. R. Loftus, vice-president of Webb & Knapp, said that under the company's proposal the provincial government would maintain control of the land, and all buildings would be used on a lease basis.

The industrial estate planned would give private research facilities a change to be developed along with research undertaken by UBC, he said. The projected road system would provide rapid access to the university without the necessity of heavy traffic in dwelling areas.

Probe Told

By FRANK RUTTER and AB KENT

A highways department engineer made money on the side by renting equipment to contractors on government jobs, the graft probe was told today.

The employee: Vincent L. Gresty, mechanical superintendent at Kamloops between 1957 and 1960, identified as a friend of Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi.

The evidence came to light today before the legislature's public accounts committee investigating allegations of graft in the highways department.

It was brought out by committee counsel Lloyd G. McKenzie in questioning Harvey A. Campbell of Creston, who said he, too, was a friend of Mr. Gagliardi's.

Mr. McKenzie based his questions upon the secret RCMP report on Project 819, a section of Trans-Canada Highway near Revelstoke, which he started to use Wednesday night.

Witness' Testimony Interrupted

On Wednesday Mr. McKenzie had asked if Mr. Gresty was part of a plan by Mr. Campbell and an equipment sales firm to jack up prices of equipment sold with guarantees of roadwork.

Mr. Campbell said he couldn't recall Mr. Gresty's role. Today Victoria's Social J. Donald Smith interrupted Mr. Campbell's testimony to say: "There are witnesses here who are perjuring themselves."

Mr. Campbell also testified that he had been told by Mr. Gagliardi to expect work on other highway projects.

Mr. Gresty also was backing Mr. Campbell's equipment firm while he was employed by the highways department, the RCMP report disclosed.

It made mention, too, of two sums of money paid to Mr. Gresty.

"Please apply the credits for this machine to him,"

'Can't Recall Circumstances'

Mr. Campbell admitted the letter bore his signature, but said he didn't remember writing it.

"I can't recall just what the circumstances were."

Mr. Campbell said he had been under the impression the machine was owned by Mr. Lymburner.

Earlier Mr. Campbell had testified that he bought his equipment firm, Mid-City Construction, from Vincent and James E. Gresty in 1957.

He held all but one share.

Mr. McKenzie asked if he paid anything for the shares.

"I don't recall that I paid anything for them."

Mr. McKenzie asked if it was true that Mr. Gresty was the financial backer for Mid-City.

Lymburner 'Very Close to Me'

He said that Burton Lymburner was also "very close to me." He is the man that Montana contractor Dick Holzworth earlier testified was a contact man between the contractors and Highways Minister Gagliardi.

Mr. McKenzie said that in the mid-1950s Mr. Gresty and Mr. Lymburner were associates in several companies.

He asked what relationship

CHARGES LIBERAL PLOT

Caouette to Be Run Over?

DONNA CONA, Que. (CP)—

Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, said today he believes reports from party sources that Liberal supporters are planning to stage a traffic accident that would put him out of action for the rest of the April 8 federal election campaign.

He first mentioned the reports near the end of a campaign speech Wednesday night in this newspaper—manufacturing town 30 miles southwest of Quebec City.

About 1,600 persons filled a church basement to overflowing for the meeting.

Mr. Caouette told a reporter today he is not making any changes in his travel plans and is not asking for a police escort in the light of the reports.

He said the Liberal party would suffer and his party would benefit if he were injured in a "deliberate accident," but he is convinced that the reports were authentic.

The reports were made to Social Credit provincial headquarters in Montreal Wednesday in two telephone calls. One call was from a man who, Caouette said, identified himself and the other was from a Social Credit organizer in Montreal who said he had been told of the accident scheme by a Liberal party worker.

In Montreal a spokesman at Liberal party headquarters, Paul Boudreau, said Mr. Caouette's reported statement is "pure fantasy."

"Who is going to believe such nonsense?" he asked. "We are adults."

In Our HOUSE

By Arthur Mayse

Overshadowed though they are by the sorry comedy at the Court-house, our legislators are not without innocent little diversions of their own. They indulged in one such on Wednesday—a cross-floor slanging match which as Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston remarked later, loosed a good few kilowatts into the air.

With Mr. Williston's salary vote still hanging fire, Premier Bennett tried to hurry through his NDP Randolph Harding through his say on Peace River versus Columbia power.

At once NDP John Squire of Alberni cracked out a protest, telling the premier he had no right to butt in on a point of order to which he wasn't entitled.

"I'm the House Leader!"

Mr. Bennett retorted; and the brawl was under way.

Opposition Leader Strachan (the and Mr. Bennett both on their feet and finger-wagging): "The premier is not raising a point of order. It is he who is out of order. The real reason for these hysterical outbursts of his is the knowledge that the people of this province are against him."

Mr. Bennett: "It is you of the Opposition who are out of order—not only in this House, but in the eyes of the people."

And more of the same, until Oak Bay Liberal Alan Macfarlane—who had already hurled a rock or two from the sidelines—ended the fuss with a courtly gesture.

"I note in the gallery," said Mr. Macfarlane, "the presence of a group of delightful young ladies from St. Margaret's School. I am sure we have presented them with an excellent example of parliamentary decorum."

Gallantly done; but he wasn't have worried. The grade 10 girls whose red blazers and berets added color to the ladies' gallery, enjoyed every minute of the crackling exchange.

Logically, this being our first private member's day after eight weeks of debate, we should have followed with a reading of Mrs. Lois Haggan's bill to amend the Fireworks Act. Instead, with the late-session air revitalized, the House plowed on to vote Mr. Williston his boosted salary and approve his estimates.

Meanwhile, outside the Legislative Chamber, one of

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Sharon Lee McGrath, age 12, of Feeding Hills, Mass., for her question:

How did the salt get in the Great Lake?

You can sit in the lake with your head and shoulders above the water. You can float with your toes in the air. In fact, you cannot sink yourself in Utah's Great Salt Lake. This is because the water is so full of dissolved salty chemicals.

Salt water, you might think, belongs in the seas, and it is strange to find a lake of saltier-than-sea-water way out in the desert of Northern Utah. The waters of the Great Salt Lake, it is estimated, contain about six times more salty chemicals than normal sea water. Yet the geologists tell us that this was once a fresh water lake.

The size of the salty lake varies with the seasons, but on the average, it is about 50 miles wide and 75 miles long. This is as large as Lake Huron, but the ancient lake of Utah was 10 times this size. We have named it Lake Bonneville, and thousands of years ago it glistened with sparkling fresh water.

Lake Bonneville stayed fresh, because its waters drained through the Snake and Columbia Rivers into the Pacific Ocean. Later the geography changed, and this outlet to the sea was sealed off. The streams and rivers brought less and less water into the lake, and the area shrank.

The so-called fresh water of the rivers has but a fraction of the salty chemicals found in sea water. But some chemicals are dissolved and carried away by every stream that runs over the ground. Through the ages, the drying Lake Bonneville gathered more and more of these chemicals and had no way to empty its salty waters into the sea. Finally it became the Great Salt Lake, which is getting saltier with every season.

it was doing well. He never did in fact go into the company again.

Mr. Campbell said Mr. Greedy once loaned him $2,000 or $3,000 personally.

He said that perhaps Mr. Greedy was anxious to help his brother come into Mid-City.

Mr. McKenzie asked if Mr. Campbell had in life ever found anyone else who did so much for him as Mr. Greedy.

Mr. Campbell said he had: the principals of Hemlock Equipment. This was the firm with which he testified Wednesday he was working on selling equipment. He would guarantee work for the purchasers of the equipment which Mr. McKenzie suggested was sold at an inflated price.

Wednesday Mr. Campbell said he was paid some $10,000 by Hemlock.

Mr. McKenzie then read part of a statement which Mr. Campbell "didn't remember" giving to the RCMP in 1959.

It said flatly that Mr. Greedy was the financial backer of Mid-City.

"Did you have any direct dealings with Mr. Gagliardi?" asked Mr. McKenzie.

"No."

Mr. Campbell did admit, however, he knew Mr. Gagliardi. "I guess you would say I was a friend of his."

Mr. McKenzie then asked if Mr. Campbell knew about Mr. Greedy receiving cheques from Union Contractors. One batch was on July 22, 1958, a total of $1,700.

Mr. Campbell said he didn't. There was also an amount of $1,394 paid by Union "on behalf of Mid-City for Vincent L. Greedy."

Mr. Campbell said this figure did "ring a bell."

"It relates to that particular scraper again."

He related a story of some mixup on ownership of the equipment, saying that it actually belonged to Burton Lymburner. He said he was involved in "a terrible struggle" to keep ahead of Mr. Lymburner and Fred S. Bell, his secretary.

Satellite Launched

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The Soviet Union launched an unmanned research satellite called Cosmos XIII early today, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The giant of the altobloss family has a wingspread of 11 feet, yet its slender wings are only inches wide. He is a sizable sea-going bird who tips the scales at about 25 pounds. Were it not for his great wings, you might mistake him for a seagull. The male is white with black-tipped pinions, and the female may wear a few patches of brown.

The altobloss can hover in the air and soar for hours, often so high that he is out of sight. With a good wind, it is estimated that he can fly at 100 miles an hour. Most of his time is spent in the air.

He comes down to the sea for his food and sometimes rests, sitting like a duck on the water.
